George Harsh Is Given Parole In 1928 Drug Clerk Slaying

Release Signed After 12 Years In Prison Camp

Convict Will Be Freed Thursday; Must Stay in Fulton.

George Harsh, who has served nearly 12 years of a life sentence for the 1928 "thrill" slaying of an Atlanta drug store clerk, yesterday received a parole from the State Prison and Parole Commission to become effective Thursday—Thanksgiving Day.

The parole order, signed by the commission's three judges, pointed to Harsh's "good record" while he had been serving in Fulton county prison camps and to the fact that no opposition was offered at a 20-minute hearing last Friday. It quoted penal authorities to the effect that Harsh had been "sufficiently stabilized" and "should be given a chance."

To Stay Here.
The prison and parole commission ordered that Harsh remain in Fulton county under the supervision of Fred C. Kendrick, state parole officer, for a period of 12 months. After the parole becomes effective Thursday Harsh will be employed in the laboratory of a down-town doctor's office.

Harsh's mother, Mrs. George R. Harsh, visited the prisoner at Bellwood camp yesterday. Tearfully she received the news of the parole with her son. She and a brother and sister attended the clemency hearing last Friday.

Both Harsh and Richard Gray (Dick) Gallagher, members of socially prominent families, received life sentences for the murder of Willard Smith in 1928. They were fellow students at Oglethorpe University at the time of the slaying.

Model Prisoner.
L. F. Wynne and William Schley Howard, Atlanta attorneys, placed Harsh's case before the commission at a hearing last Friday, emphasizing that he had made a model prisoner, had endeavored to pay his debt to society, and had not become degraded by the influence of prison life.

Attorney Wynne praised the board for its actions.

"It was a courageous action, in all the circumstances, and carried out the true purposes of the parole system," he declared. "Here is a boy who committed a grave indiscretion in his youth. He has paid the price to society."

"The function of parole is first punishment, then rehabilitation and return to society. This action sees those objectives being served."

The parole order contained the following comment which was based on the case record:

"George Harsh has served nearly 12 years with a good record."

Rugg Textbooks Are Dropped From Approved List by State

Action Taken for General Welfare of School System, Board Says in Resolution Discontinuing Used Books Called 'Subversive' in Teachings.

The State Board of Education yesterday struck textbooks by Dr. Harold Rugg and Louise Kruger from the state's approved list, apparently ending a controversy which began several months ago over charges that the books espoused Nazism and Fascism.

A resolution adopted by the board pointed out that the members were not passing or attempting to pass upon the "merits" of the controversy. The board expressed the opinion this action would be for the "general welfare" of the schoolbook system.

Stop Purchases.
Henceforth, it was pointed out, books by Rugg and Kruger will not be brought by the state for free distribution. Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, said the board's order would prevent individual systems from purchasing them.

He said about 7,570 of the social science readers had been

F.D.R. Wants Labor Peace, Green Asserts

Workers Must Make Sacrifices, Stimson Tells AFL Parley.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 18.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's desire for a labor peace move, to begin in the White House, was communicated today to the American Federation of Labor convention which also was informed by Secretary of War Stimson that workers will have to make sacrifices under the defense program.

AFL President William Green, deeply skeptical that a labor settlement was brought any closer by John L. Lewis' announced intention of resigning the CIO presidency, told the applauding convention of the President's desire for unity in labor ranks.

Green said:

"The President of the United States is willing to help us and assist us and he has asked if committees (AFL and CIO) can be assembled and put to work, that they meet with him first of all and explore with him the situation at the White House, there to receive his assurances of good will and co-operation."

"And it appears to me the normal strength of such a beginning would naturally reflect itself all through the honest and sincere negotiations."

Urging industrial peace as an absolute need for rearming America, Secretary Stimson, who flew here to address the convention, stressed the effort needed for the defense program and said:

"Today our production, hopeful as it has been thus far, is as yet very far from adequate. Sacrifices will undoubtedly be called for from labor, as they will be called for from the other citizens of the republic but such sacrifices I believe will be willingly contributed and not compelled."

He gave assurances workers would retain the right of collective bargaining.

Cornell Admits 'Fifth Down,' Accepts Defeat

Dartmouth's Freak Victory Snaps Ithacans' Win Streak at 18.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Through its own gracious refusal to accept a victory tainted by official error, Cornell today removed itself from the shrinking list of the nation's undefeated football teams, conceding that the game with Dartmouth last Saturday rightfully was won by Dartmouth, 3 to 0.

As undeniable proof rolled in, backed by a statement from Referee W. H. Friesell Jr. that he was convinced he was in error, the "fifth-down" episode was ended, and with it ended a Cornell string of 18 games without defeat.

Promptly Athletic Director James Lynch and Coach Carl Snavely wired congratulations to Athletic Director William H. McCarter and Coach Earl Blaik, of Dartmouth. McCarter as promptly accepted the victory, telegraphing the Cornell authorities:

"Thank you for your wire. Dartmouth accepts the victory and your congratulations, and salutes the Cornell team, the honorable and honored opponent of her longest unbroken football rivalry."

Motion pictures, charts of football writers and Friesell's admission all blended into a picture which showed that Cornell had scored a supposedly winning touchdown when the ball should have been in Dartmouth's possession on its 20-yard line with less than six seconds to play.

In explaining his error to Asa S. Bushnell, commissioner of the Eastern Intercollegiate Football Association, Friesell reported:

"Since the conclusion of Saturday's Cornell-Dartmouth football game at Hanover I have made careful and thorough study of all evidence having to do with the final series of plays which led to Cornell's touchdown and 7-to-3 victory just as time expired in the fourth quarter."

"On the basis of numerous charts kept by the press and motion pictures taken by both of the competing colleges I now am convinced beyond shadow of doubt that I was in error in allowing Cornell possession of the ball for the play on which it scored. I find that, after a Cornell first down on the six-yard-line, there followed three line plays which gained five yards, and then a forward pass into the end zone knocked down by Dartmouth."

"At this point Dartmouth was entitled to take the ball on its 20-yard line, first down with about six seconds of play remaining. Unfortunately, however, thinking that it was Cornell's ball, fourth down, on the six-yard line, I awarded it to them for what actually was an illegal fifth-down play which produced the winning score."

"This mistake was entirely mine as the game's referee, and not shared in or contributed to by any of the three other officials. I realize, of course, that my jurisdiction ceased at the close of the game and that the football rules give me no authority to change even an incorrect decision such as the one described, but I do want to acknowledge my mistake to you, and, if you see fit, to the football public as well."

McArter reported that an invitation to play another game with Cornell for the benefit of the New York infantile paralysis fund had been declined because of Dartmouth's traditional opposition to post-season contests.

German Agent Is Picked Up By Dies Group

Man Tells Newsmen He Is Employed by Gestapo.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Chairman Martin Dies, of the house committee investigating un-American activities, announced tonight that his agents had raided the quarters of "Italian and German organizations" in Chicago, New York and other cities and had seized a man who was in the Nazi secret service.

He reported that the raiders here had been given 10 subpoenas duces tecum and had brought in letters, card files, pamphlets, documents and ledgers. Translators were assigned to the task of studying them.

The man taken into custody identified himself as Heinrich Peter Fassbender, 23, alias Harry Smith, of Dusseldorf, Germany. He told newsmen that he had been working for the Gestapo since 1935, first in Spain and Belgium and finally in the United States.

Arrested in West.
One of Dies' aides said Fassbender had been picked up on the west coast while "operating out of Los Angeles" and that he was flown here today from Washington.

After Fassbender had testified before the committee here, Dies stated:

"Fassbender's testimony checks up with evidence we have received from the files of German organizations. He was in the secret service. His specialty was espionage."

"Hot Situation."
Dies declined to answer a reporter's query concerning whether Fassbender had asked the committee's "protection," but said:

"It's a pretty hot situation. What he's told us links up certain representatives of certain governments with his activities. Fassbender has been operating in all parts of the United States for over a year."

"If the committee authorizes the publication of the 'white paper' that would be authority to make public this man's testimony. Until that authority is given, I can't tell you any more."

Meanwhile, he will serve as acting chairman. The Georgian will succeed the late Chairman Key Pittman, of Nevada.

Roosevelt Foresaw His '41 Residence

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Long before the November election determined their 1941 domicile, President and Mrs. Roosevelt gave their address for the 1941 White House, Washington, D. C.

Address blanks for the book, now being distributed to subscribers, had to be returned by the first week in October.

Mr. and Mrs. Wendell L. Willkie are listed as living here on Fifth avenue, as last year.

Dropped from the register are Richard A. Knight, an attorney who stood on his head at the opening of the Metropolitan Opera last year, and Mr. and Mrs. George Lowther 3d. Knight explained at the time that his acrobatics were induced by the "divine singing" of Elisabeth Rethberg.

Sweden Repays Credit Granted by United States

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The Swedish legation announced tonight that it had repaid the balance of a $15,000,000 credit granted Sweden by the United States on March 8, of which only about $4,000,000 had been used.

A statement said that "after the events in April, shipments to Sweden to the expected level could not be maintained and consequently that country could no longer take advantage of said credit as originally planned."

(The reference to "events in April" apparently concerned the German capture of Norway and Denmark and subsequent control of trade channels in the eastern Baltic area.)

Florida Authorities Attack Health Problem As 'Okies' Swarm Army Camp Seeking Work

Jobless Families Destitute, Others Still Lack Necessities.

CAMP BLANDING, Fla., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Army, Red Cross, health and welfare officials today tackled the task of combating a serious problem which has mushroomed up here where the government is building a big training center for troops and thousands of migrants have swamped seeking jobs.

More than 18,000 workmen are employed in the three eight-hour shifts which are being used to rush the $10,000,000, 119,000-acre Army camp into readiness for the first of 40,000 troops early next month.

Many of these workmen and their families, as well as hundreds of others who still hope to get jobs on the big project, are camping out in the piney woods and palmetto

First Recruits Under Draft Enter Army

Sworn in From New England to the Pacific Coast.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—In scattered communities from New England to the Pacific coast, little groups of men raised their right hands today, swore to bear "true faith and allegiance" to the United States, and became soldiers under the nation's first peacetime conscription program.

The historic ceremony, to be repeated day after day in hundreds of draft centers until 800,000 men have entered service by next June 30, was believed to have taken place first in Boston.

There, John Edward Lawton, 21-year-old unemployed plumber's helper, and single, was credited with being the first to qualify for service of the nearly 17,000,000 men from 21 to 35 years of age, inclusive, who registered under the draft law last October 16.

"You are the first man in the United States to be inducted under this program," Captain Harold E. Linderson told him. "You've got a whole lot to live up to and we're expecting a whole lot from you."

Spanish, Italian Envoys Follow Balkan Ruler

'Second Diplomatic Offensive' Against Britain Launched in Berlin.

By the United Press.

SOFIA, Nov. 18.—King Boris of Bulgaria visited Chancellor Adolf Hitler in Germany yesterday, an official communique revealed tonight. The brief communique did not reveal where the meeting took place.

Further details of Boris' secret visit were not available.

Political circles were startled by the unexpected visit, which they regard as significant in view of the present intense German diplomatic activity.

ENVOYS FROM SPAIN, ITALY MEET HITLER

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—(UP)—The Axis powers today opened what they described as the "second diplomatic offensive" against their enemies when Chancellor Hitler met the foreign ministers of Italy and Spain at his Berchtesgaden chalet.

The "first offensive," regarded here as begun with the signing of the German, Italian, Japanese alliance in Berlin on September 27, was concluded by the visit to Berlin of Soviet Premier Molotov.

It was understood that today's negotiations at Berchtesgaden with Count Galeazzo Ciano of Italy and Ramon Serrano Suner of Spain were completed more quickly than had originally been expected. Usually reliable sources believe that interest now will shift immediately to Vienna—where German and Italian diplomats later this week will meet representatives of Hungary, Slovakia and Rumania.

Antonescu Is Next.
At the last Vienna conference the Axis powers settled territorial claims of Hungary and Bulgaria against Rumania at the latter's expense and Germany assumed dominance over what remained of Rumania.

(General Ion Antonescu, head of the Rumanian state, will go to Germany on Friday, according to reports in official Bucharest circles.)

(Antonescu arrived tonight from Rome, where he conferred with the leaders of the Fascist party. Government authorities and Iron Guardists gave him a warm welcome.)

The Nazis say the "first offensive" was primarily of a preparatory nature to lay down their grandiose plans for a "new order" in Europe and Africa. They claim that the second stage will see the beginning of making these plans effective.

Although virtually nothing had tary facilities. An effort will be made to have all the migrants move into these areas.

Reports that three Negroes and one white man "froze to death or died hungry" Friday night were investigated by health officers, but could not be confirmed, although dozens of the migratory folk in the scattered camps asserted the reports were true and some even insisted they had seen the dead men.

Representatives of the Army, the American Red Cross, the contractors, the State Board of Health, the State Welfare Board and the Travelers' Aid Society mapped further attacks on the problem at a conference here late today.

2 States Still In Doubt About The Election

Missouri, Kansas Don't Know Who Is New Governor.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 18.—(AP) Missouri and Kansas still have a bad case of election jitters 13 days after the votes were cast.

This is the Thanksgiving season, when folks usually are absorbed in asking, "Who'll win the M. U. K. U. football game?" But right now the biggest question is: "Who's Governor?"

Officially, Forrest Donnell, Republican, has been recorded as the winner in Missouri by a 2,504-vote margin over Lawrence McDaniel, Democrat, for the post which a Democrat, Lloyd A. Stark, now holds. But today C. M. Hulien, Democratic state chairman, announced his committee would investigate reports of "illegal use of vast sums of money and vote buying." He added that if any basis was found for such reports there would be "further action."

Officially and unofficially, Kansas doesn't know who won in that state. Right now the Republican incumbent, Payne Ratner, is trailing the Democrat, William H. Burke, by 979 votes, but the count of 7,100 absentee ballots cast by Kansans from outside the state is far from complete and Ratner has been cutting steadily into the Burke margin.

Don't mention turkey in Missouri and Kansas for a time. The politicians just don't feel like eating.

Willkie in Florida For Needed Rest

HOBE SOUND, Fla., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, came to this remote resort community near Palm Beach today for two weeks of rest and isolation from politics.

After two months of ceaseless campaigning, Mr. and Mrs. Willkie and his secretary, Miss Grace Grahn, arrived to visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Verner Reed, of New York.

His neighbor, Samuel F. Pryor Jr., Connecticut national committeeman and Republican eastern campaign manager, arranged for him a program of deep sea fishing and sun bathing.

Willkie said he would consider no matters of business or politics during this vacation.

WILLKIE TO ADDRESS FRATERNITY GROUP

ATTLEBORO, Mass., Nov. 18.—(AP)—L. G. Balfour, chairman of the National Interfraternity Conference, announced today that Wendell Willkie would address that organization in New York November 29 and that his remarks would be broadcast.

Balfour said the Republican leader would come to New York and return to Florida by airplane.

Two Savannahans Killed in Crash

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Two Savannahans were killed instantly and a third critically injured shortly after midnight on the Oglethorpe highway six miles south of Hinesville, when the automobile in which they were riding to Savannah crashed into the rear of a parked truck.

The dead are Dave Finn, United States custom house inspector, and Mrs. Celia Nathan.

Mrs. Esta Finn, wife of the dead man, is in a Jesup hospital, and her condition is reported critical. The fatal accident this morning brought the death toll of Savannahans to three over the weekend. Late yesterday afternoon near Reidsville 20-year-old Luther Henry Knight, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther L. Knight, of Savannah, was killed when the car he was driving collided with a gasoline-driven railroad coach.

Mr. and Mrs. Finn and Mrs. Nathan were returning from a visit to Hazelhurst when the tragedy occurred.

WACYCROSS, Ga., Nov. 18.—The South Georgia Negro Methodist Conference, in session here since Wednesday night, wound up in a blaze, one day ahead of schedule.

King Solomon church, where delegates from throughout Georgia assembled for the annual meeting, was destroyed by fire early yesterday. The adjoining parsonage also was burned.

Firemen said the blaze was so hot it softened the asphalt paving on the highway in front of the building, and scorched several lengths of fire hose.

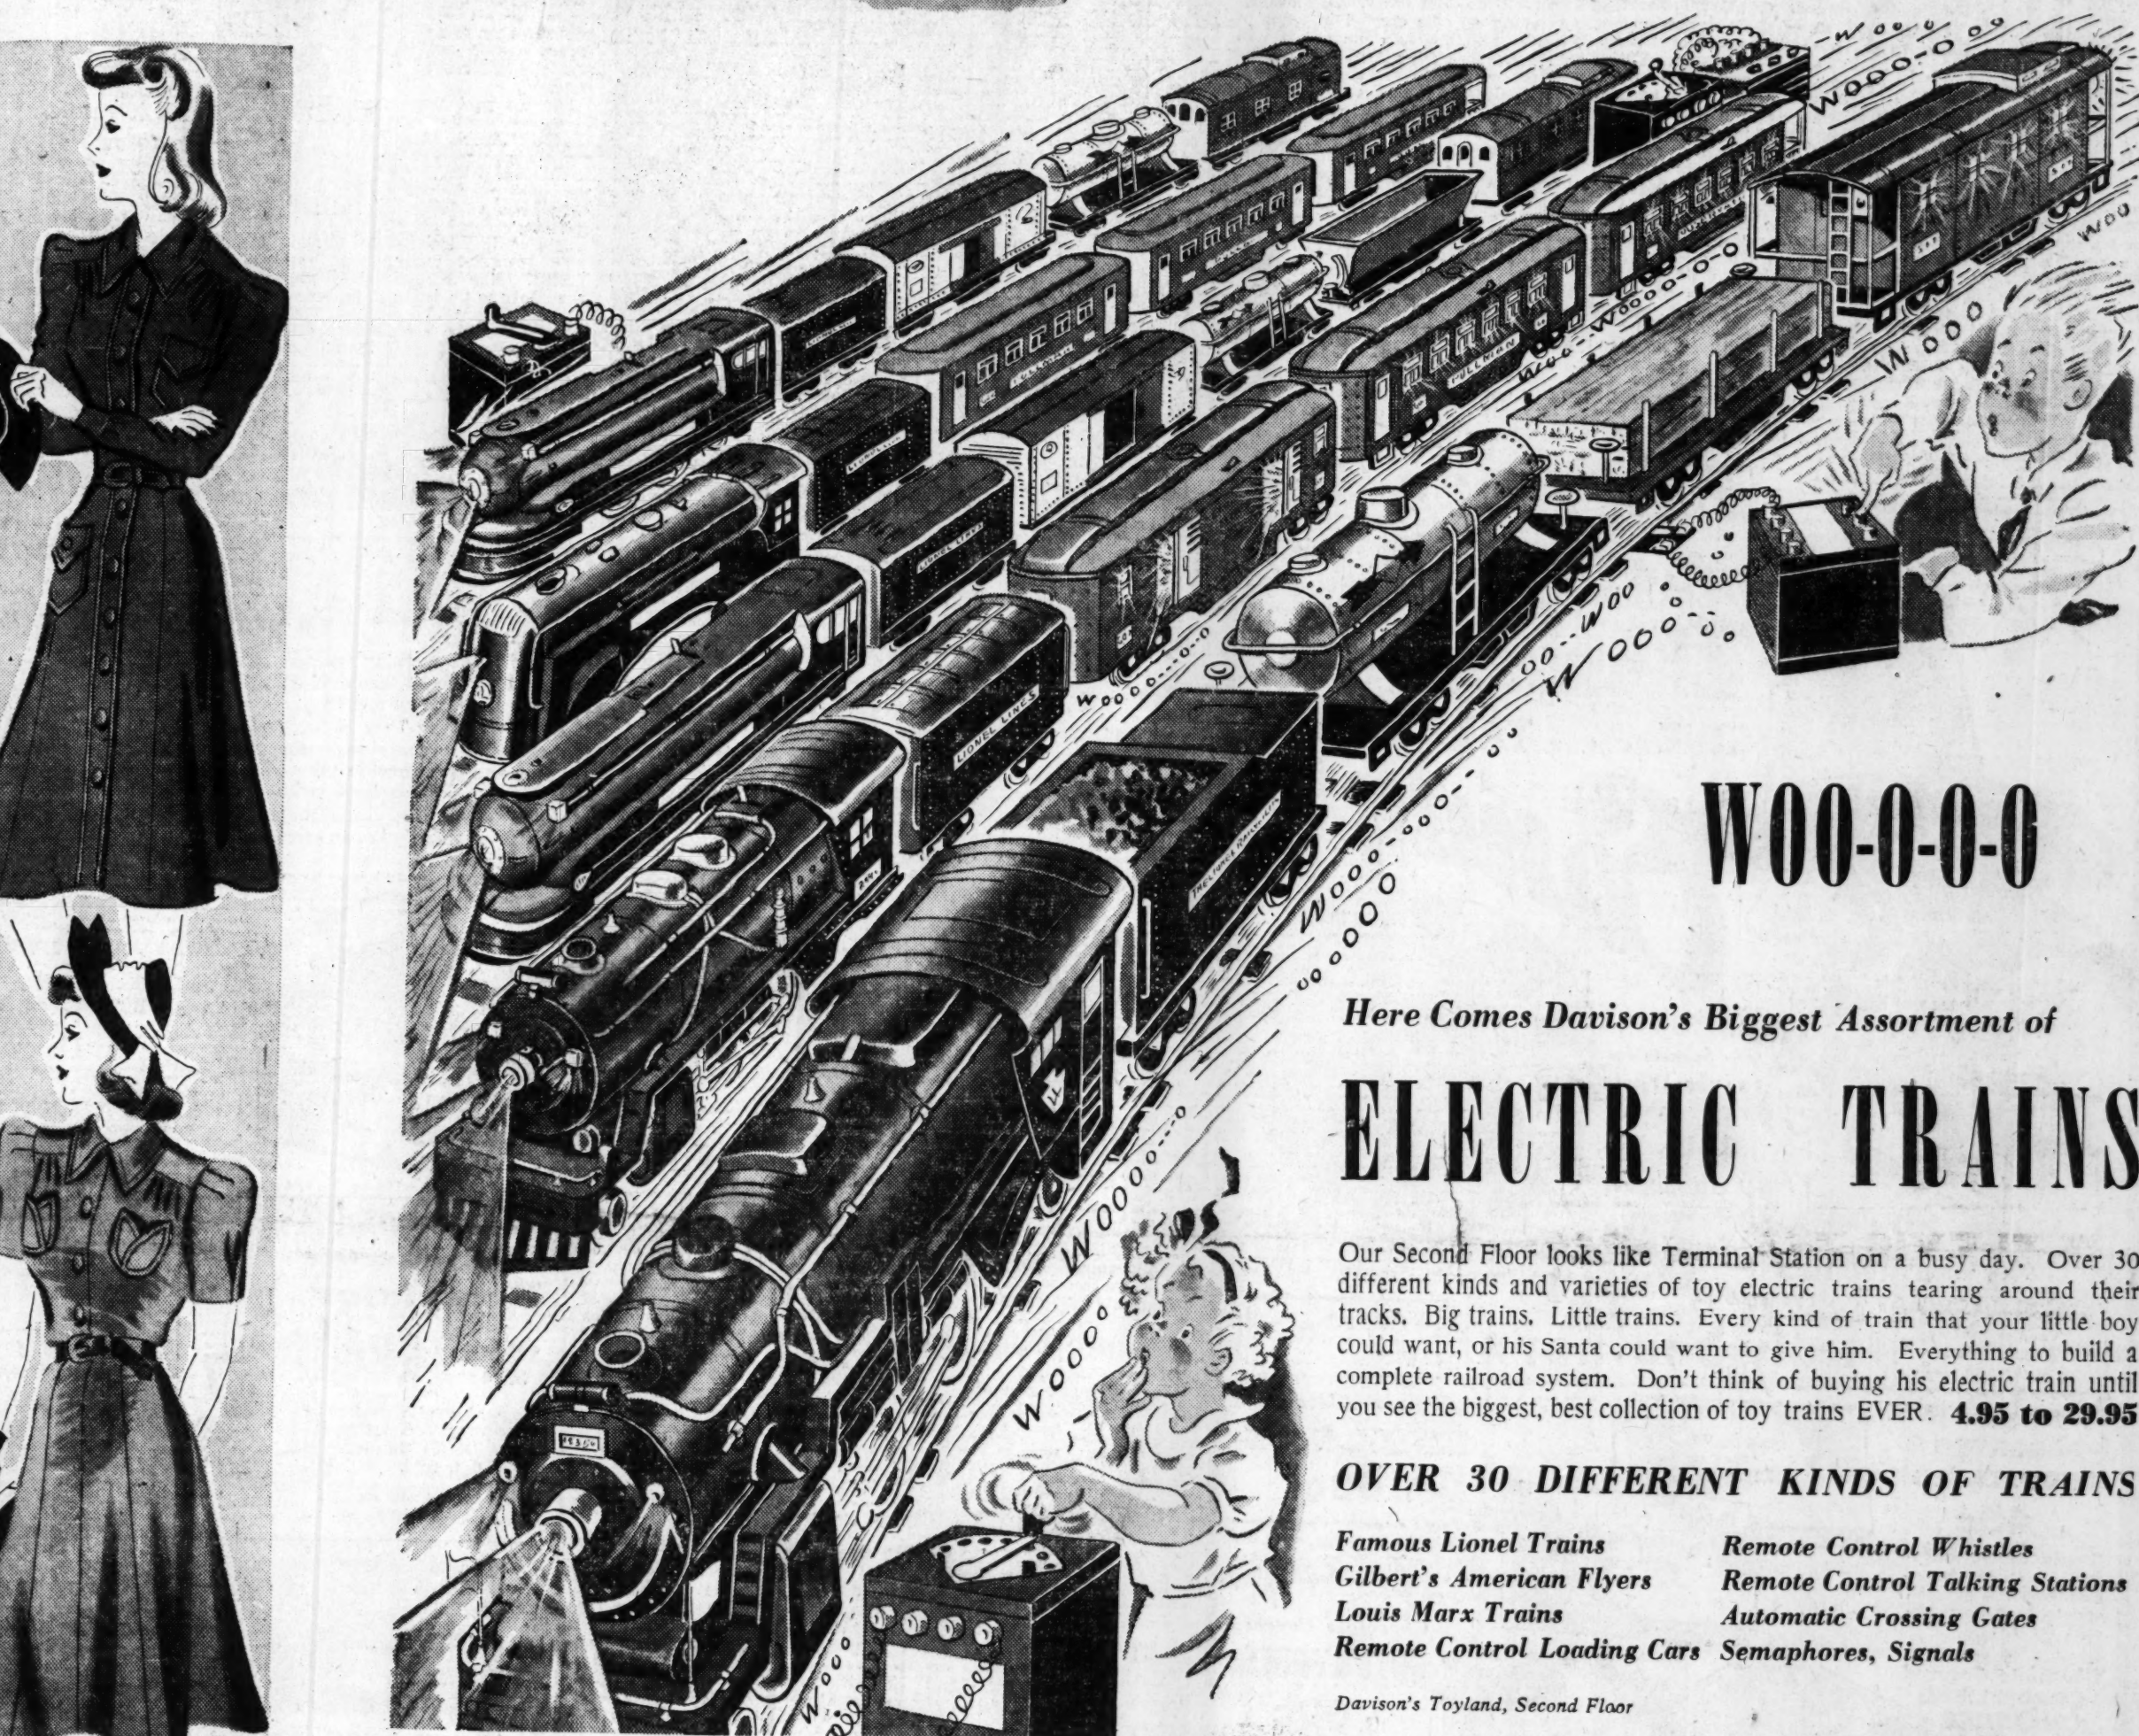

Hearing Is Set Today In Edison Jail Death

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. EDISON, Ga., Nov. 18.—A twice-postponed commitment trial for Clem Harrison, charged with murder in connection with the flaming jail death of 23-year-old Herbert Brown, will be held at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, Sheriff J. B. Adams has announced.

Harrison is an Edison policeman. Brown, the sheriff said, was arrested the night of October 18, and placed in the local jail. The building later was found in flames. Mrs. Talmadge Returns From Post in Korea

Presbyterian Missionary Implies Japanese Drained by War.

Happy to be home and wondering to just what far corner of the earth she must journey next, Mrs. John Talmadge, wife of a Presbyterian missionary, was back in Decatur yesterday.

She was glad to read papers that told the truth, hear radios that spoke without censorship, ride in cars, turn on faucets and get hot water, and in general enjoy the simple pleasures of life in free America.

For the past three years Mrs. Talmadge, the former Roslin (Rocky) Arnold, has been with her husband at a mission station at Kunsan, Korea. For more than the past year they might well have been at home, for all the good they could do there.

The warm welcome that Japan once accorded missionaries has chilled. The people are afraid to accept the Christian faith, fearing governmental persecution. The missionaries are reluctant to offer their message, fearing that those to whom they spoke would suffer.

They have no fear for themselves. Missionaries are a stout-hearted lot. And the Japanese are fearful of arousing the wrath of Uncle Sam. But the work of the church has come to a standstill and those who love to work in far places, among people of different race must find some other field now.

Choosing her words carefully, for fear that any criticism she might utter would get back to Japan and be used against her husband who is still there settling mission matters, Mrs. Talmadge implied that Japan's military adventures have drained the country, and that starvation is near for many of the people.

But she can't talk freely of those things for publication. Only when her husband comes home, about Christmas, can they both speak frankly.

Mrs. Talmadge and her 2-year-old son, Johnny, are at the home of her sister, Mrs. John D. Grady, in Decatur.

TEST TO BE EASY.

ARMY in Georgia

Men convicted of a felony or on parole or probation will not be accepted for army service, the War Department announced yesterday in Washington.

The ruling settled a question raised by Governor E. D. Rivers when he pardoned three men who said they wanted to enter the army.

Commanders of the army's corps areas were informed "the department feels that its duty to the greatest number requires that it insure as far as possible that men inducted into service should not be forced in the close intimacy of barracks life to associate with a man who has been convicted."

STIMSON TO LEAVE
FORT BENNING THURSDAY
Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson is expected to make his headquarters at Fort Benning until Thursday, when he will return to Washington after an inspection of several southern army posts.

Patton, leaving by plane yesterday morning to address the American Federation of Labor convention in New Orleans. Due to return to the post last night, Stimson plans aerial inspection trips to Fort McClellan, Ala., and Camp Blanding, Fla., before his final departure.

ATLANTA FLYER CALLED TO ACTIVE DUTY
Joseph B. Duckworth, of Atlanta, an air corps reserve major, has been called to active duty at Barksdale Field, La., the War Department announced in Washington yesterday.

Mayor Harris Is Unopposed in College Park

Official Goes Into Office Second Straight Time Without Opponent.

George W. Harris will serve a third term as mayor of College Park, unopposed in the community's annual election, for which entrance deadline passed yesterday at noon.

No opposition was recorded for three councilmen also seeking reelection. They are Wallace Sitton, an accountant, from the first ward; Fred Shaefer, building and loan secretary, from the second ward, and Early Morris, a retail shoe merchant, from the third ward.

This is the second term to which Harris has been elected unanimously. It is the first time in College Park history that a mayor has gone into office twice in succession, without opposition.

Harris, a feed store merchant, has been instrumental in pushing through a city-wide street-paving program and beginning the construction of a $65,000 community center on the site of old Cox College.

Draft Boards Require Oaths For Deferment

Affidavits from the employers of registrants who seek Group II military deferment and from the dependents of those seeking Group III deferment will be required by local boards in Georgia. But such claims cannot be filed until the registrant has been classified on the basis of his questionnaires.

Firms and industries employing more than eight men can ask deferment for any employee they consider essential to the smooth and efficient operation of the business, according to Adjutant General Marion Williamson. Such requests must be made out on Form SS-42, now available at state selective service headquarters.

Likewise, wives and other dependents can seek deferment for their means of support by filling out similar affidavits that will be furnished by local boards. It was emphasized, however, that deferment will be considered by local boards only after actual classification of individuals has begun, and that requests for deferment must be withheld until questionnaires are received by the registrant.

Employers who are in doubt as to deferment regulations should contact Lieutenant Colonel P. S. Moses or Major Charles J. Brockman at state headquarters, who have been appointed advisors on occupational deferment.

General Williamson pointed out, in this connection, that prospective trainees, employers and dependents who are submitting requests for deferments to local boards far in advance of the time of classification are merely complicating the work of local boards.

"When the time comes for classification," he said, "the registrant, his employer and his dependents will be given every opportunity to substantiate any deferment claims."

Traffic Signs' Erection Begun In Druid Hills

Hazardous Four-Way Controls To Be Completely Abolished.

Erection of "blinker-type" traffic controls in Druid Hills began yesterday, and the job will be completed in two weeks, according to DeKalb County Police Chief J. T. Dailey.

The new controls completely eliminate hazardous "four-way stop signs" in the section of the county, and furnish day and night warning of through streets.

Dailey announced two months ago that he was preparing to abolish four-way controls.

The new signs are being installed under the supervision of Guy Butler, county electrician. The following locations, with the latter street designated as through, will get signs:

East Lake at Ponce de Leon, Lakeshore at Ponce de Leon, North Decatur road at Briarcliff, Ebyway at Springdale, Lullwater at North Decatur, Oxford road at North Decatur, North Decatur at the entrance to Emory university, and Clifton at North Decatur.

Plans for State To Get Million Are Approved

Board of Education Acts To Conform to U. S. Rules.

Technical plans conforming to federal requirements whereby Georgia would receive about $1,000,000 in federal funds for national defense education were approved by the State Board of Education yesterday.

School Superintendent M. D. Collins said the state would get $499,000 under the defense farm program and $200,000 under the NYA educational workers program. This would be boosted by Georgia's share in the government's $8,000,000 program for equipping farm educational shops.

The board approved appointment of W. C. Britt, superintendent of schools at Snellville, Ga., as the state farm shop superintendent. T. G. Quigley, of Georgia Tech, a past president of the American Vocational Association, was approved as state NYA educational superintendent.

Engine Output For Interceptor Planes Rushed

Expected To Roll Off at 1,000 a Month in Year.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Engines designed specifically for use in swift interceptor pursuit planes are expected to be rolling off the production line of an Indianapolis factory at the rate of 1,000 a month by November, 1941, the General Motors Corporation announced tonight.

The statement on the output of its Allison division was the first made by the corporation since the stepping up of production on the heels of a lesson taught by the European war—that the liquid-cooled engine apparently was dominating the fighting plane field.

The output of the Allison company is doubly important to American defense because it manufactures the only engine of its type presently available for pursuit planes built here for the army air corps and for Britain's Royal type of plane being used by the Air Force.

The interceptor pursuit is the RAF in fending off air assaults in the battle of Britain.

The Allison engine, developed over a long period of years, has been adapted to three makes of pursuits—the bimotored Lockheed, the Bell "Airacobra" and the Curtiss P-40—and to the Bell "Airacobra," known as a bomber-destroyer.

The three makes of pursuits currently represent the United States' bid for air superiority in the category of fast fighters. Until the Packard Motor Car Company, which is expected to manufacture a quantity of British-designed liquid-cooled engines, and the Ford Motor Company, which is working on its own design, get into production, the Allison division of General Motors will bear the entire burden of pursuit plane "inline" engine manufacture.

Electric Firm Buys Northside Drive Property

No Plans Announced for Developing Large Vacant Tract.

Purchase of more than six and a half acres of vacant property at the corner of Northside drive and Bishop street, and along the main line of the Southern railroad, was announced Monday by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, the property being purchased from Mrs. Mary White Staton, according to deeds filed at the courthouse.

The property has large frontage on both Northside drive and Bishop street, running along the railroad for several hundred feet. The Westinghouse company has no announced plans for the present, but it is understood that Robert & Co. and other engineers and architects are working on plans that will call for a development of more than a half million dollars.

No announcement was made of the amount paid for the property. The purchasers have been engaged for some time in trying to find a large and suitable location for their new plant, and with the acreage purchased, will, it is understood, begin at an early date on the erection of a plant that will give it much increased manufacturing capacity.

ATLANTA, GA., NOVEMBER 19, 1940.

For the Nation's Good

It is to be prayerfully hoped that peace can be arranged between the two great divisions of organized labor in the United States, the AFL and the CIO. An end to the rivalry and warfare between these two great unionized groups would redound to the benefit of the entire nation, at this time, more than any other imaginable event.

John L. Lewis, president of the CIO, in accordance with his promise made during the recent presidential campaign, that he would resign if President Roosevelt was re-elected, yesterday gave up his post. Lewis, perhaps involuntarily, has come to be the symbolic individual held by the public to blame for most of the unsavory tactics employed by labor in recent years, such as the "sit-down" strikes. It is felt that his passing from the presidency of the CIO removes the greatest of all individual stumbling blocks to the intensely desirable peace in labor's ranks.

America is today engaged in the greatest peacetime program of defensive armament in her history. This nation has begun the creation of a navy, an army and an air force that will be so strong, no other power, or coalition of powers, would ever dare to threaten us or to disregard our wishes in international affairs.

There have been unavoidable delays in the launching of this program. Many of these delays have now been eliminated for the future, or a method found for their prevention.

At the present time the workers in a large aircraft factory, engaged in building planes for this government and for Great Britain, are on strike. The union involved is a CIO affiliate. While, of course, the justice of the strikers' demands, or of the management's attitude, is unknown to outsiders, it is nevertheless a disgrace and a bitter illustration of the lack of understanding of the national and world emergency.

Some means has got to be found to quickly end this strike and to prevent any future strikes in factories engaged in defense contracts.

It may be the government will have to use a firm hand. But it would be far better if labor itself would provide the means to ban any such strikes in the future. If labor is to do this it must be united, there must be no rift in its own ranks. Hence the vital importance of the efforts, now under way, for peace between the AFL and the CIO.

Georgians Volunteer

There is a sense of pride and deep satisfaction in the report that so many Georgians have volunteered for first call in selective military service that at least the first, and probably the second and third calls for men from this state will be filled from the volunteer roster.

The selective service method of securing the desired number of men for the Army or Navy is beyond question the best and most democratic way. It is resorted to, not because Americans must be compelled to serve their country, but because the draft is the fair way, the best way. It takes those men best fitted and leaves in civilian occupation those best suited for essential occupations and those whose family responsibilities must come first. Under the draft, those who stay at home serve their nation at their best ability, just as do those chosen to wear the uniform.

Despite these facts, however, it is a reassuring thing to know that the young men of the state so fully realize their duty and responsibility to their nation that many more than enough to fill the first draft quota have volunteered. There will, undoubtedly, be greater satisfaction to the individual, too, in the knowledge that he is serving of his own volition, as a volunteer.

Men registered for the draft, who wish to volunteer, may easily do so by simply requesting their local draft board to place their names at the head of the list. Many have already done this and others undoubtedly will.

There is an ancient saying, utterly untrue, that one volunteer is worth three drafted men.

Untrue, as this is, however, it is still gratifying to know that so many Georgia youth are not only willing, but eager, to serve their nation in time of emergency.

The First Step?

Protest by the Vichy government against mass deportations of French citizens from the province of Lorraine, recalls a story which was rather widely circulated about a year ago, soon after the outbreak of war in Europe.

This story had to do with the plans of Hitler and his Nazis for the future of Europe in event Germany succeeded in crushing all nations who dared to oppose her. The plans were alleged to be genuine, to have been taken from archives of the Nazi government in Berlin.

One of the most startling items in these plans for the Europe of the future, was a scheme to transport the entire population of France into Africa, leaving the lands of France unoccupied and open for colonization by Germany. This, it was said, would provide in Europe proper the territory the Reich professes to need for its own people.

Another feature of the master plan was the utter subjugation of Britain, reduction through starvation of the British population to less than half its present total and enslavement of the survivors as industrial workers for Germany.

So far-fetched are such plans they appear ridiculous. Yet the world has learned that no proposal by the Nazis is too cruel, too outrageous. Decimation of entire populations is an item of their creed, if such decimation offers advantage to Germany. Their ruthlessness in regard to human life has been demonstrated time and time again, in Poland, in their own country in regard to the Jews, in Rotterdam, etc.

If this wholesale deportation of the Lorraine French continues, it is logical to suppose it is but the first step in the greater plan, the deportation of every French individual, men, women and children, from France and their establishment in northern Africa, there to live or die as they may, but to the utter indifference of the inhuman Nazi mind.

The French government at Vichy will undoubtedly exist long enough to experience heart-breaking regret that it ever attempted conciliation of, or co-operation with, Hitler and his minions. France's agony is not yet over and her only hope must lie with those forces of "free France" which are co-operating with Britain and which are, week by week, growing stronger and attracting more and more Frenchmen, all over the world, to their standard.

Somebody Said "Boo!"

Gradually the truth about the sea affair off Tampico, in which one German ship was scuttled and destroyed by her own crew and three others came back to port after a brief attempt to start across the waters to Spain, or somewhere, will come out. In the meantime there is a haziness about the whole thing that is, it must be admitted, intriguing.

Crews of the four vessels said, at first, they returned because of the presence of British warships just outside the mouth of the river. So, in the German tradition, the captain of the Phrygia scuttled his ship and the Orinoco and two others turned tail and hurried back to safety.

Now, according to a Mexican gunboat sent out to investigate, there were no British ships of war anywhere near. It is believed the commanders of the German freighters mistook a United States destroyer or two for British ships and didn't tarry long enough to find the truth.

In any event, the scuttling of the Phrygia adds one more glory to the German naval flag. That flag is already starred with almost more honors than it can carry. The scuttling of the Graf Spee and of the Columbus. The daring sinking of helpless ships, carrying cargoes of refugee children, in mid-Atlantic. The sinking of the Lusitania, of the Athenia and other defenseless prey.

Herr Hitler should devise a special decoration for the captain of the Phrygia and his fellow German heroes.

Editorial Symposium

CONGRESS . . . TO BE OR NOT TO BE.

With congress scheduled to vote today on the questions of adjournment, which would pass its unfinished business to the next congress, meeting in January, the PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER declares, "The place for this congress is in Washington until the next congress takes over the job," pointing out that "Adjournment now would put the members out of touch with the daily march of important events" affecting this country's welfare.

"Any day, a crisis may arise which requires congressional attention," says the DENVER POST. "It would be unwise and unfair to the American people . . . to leave all the responsibility on the shoulders of the President." Too, the PROVIDENCE JOURNAL insists there are "too many measures vital to national unity" remaining for "senate consideration to permit an adjournment now." And the ST. LOUIS GLOBE-DEMOCRAT believes that while "The Democratic situation may not require further legislative activity of a major nature until January . . . who can forecast the mold of foreign events during the next month and a half?"

"The fact is, of course, that congress has not yet completed its work," declares the WASHINGTON POST, and the NEW ORLEANS TIMES-PICAYUNE lists such unfinished business as "the proposed amendments to the labor act, a bill facilitating appeals from rulings" of federal agencies to the courts, "the Ramspeck bill extending civil service" and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's request for a "15 to 20 billion-dollar hoist to the federal debt limit."

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

PRESIDENT'S UNFINISHED BUSINESS WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The post-election lull is over. The President is back from his vacation cruise. The time has come to dispose of the multifarious unfinished business which was ticketed "Wait until after November 5" and put aside during the campaign. Unfortunately, however, there are few signs that the major item of unfinished business—organization of the defense setup for maximum efficiency and maximum production—will be tackled even now.

Possibly the President will change his mind in the weeks ahead, or already has changed it while idling on the Potomac with Attorney General Robert H. Jackson and Harry L. Hopkins. But several men who saw him just before he left, including at least one important official of the defense commission itself, received the strong impression that his impulse was to let matters slide.

Letting matters slide would not provide an appointment of Donald Nelson or one of the other candidates as defense commission co-ordinator. Unhappily, the real fault in the existing situation is the complex conflict of authorities between the defense commission and the War, Navy and Treasury Departments. Because the President has failed to say who is boss, these four agencies are now engaged in a hot four-cornered feud.

The feud does not involve quite all of the men at the top, but is participated in by most of their subordinates, which is just as crippling. And the mere naming of a co-ordinator to work within the defense commission would not improve matters greatly.

Yet the President seems unable to bring himself to make any one a big boss. As reliably reported, his present inclinations are (1) to continue to rely on existing facilities, namely, the four agencies at one another's throat; (2) to create no centralized super-authority with independent powers, preferring to delegate his own powers to the defense commission as required; (3) to delegate his powers rather freely, as when he gave the vital power to determine industrial priorities to a board composed of Messrs. William S. Knudsen, Edward R. Stettinius and Leon Henderson.

TYPICAL CONFLICT The incident of the priorities board's appointment is a good illustration of the kind of problem arising from the present setup. While the defense commission has authority to negotiate the most important defense contracts, supervision of production is left to the War, Navy and Treasury departments. Certain of these men, who have little industrial experience, seem to share the feeling of many other officers and government officials that the defense commission is an interloper.

Some time ago they persuaded Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox that rigid defense priorities ought to be enforced in aircraft factories, requiring all civilian orders to be laid aside. This view was presented to the President, who queried the defense commission. The commission experts objected strenuously, arguing that laying aside civilian orders would merely create empty factory space, since the specialized machines to produce additional combat planes were not available.

The dispute brought the long argument over enforcing priorities to a head. Plans for the present priorities board were prepared in the defense commission and presented to the President at a White House meeting. After Secretaries Stimson and Knox had been given 24 hours to look for objections, the plans were approved. Thus the dispute ended, only to be replaced by others.

One is now in progress, for example, concerning the contracts negotiated before the recent changes in the tax laws. The army and navy want these contracts changed to give the contractors the benefit of the new amortization provisions of the corporate income tax law. The defense commission argues that prices in the existing contracts, calculated on the basis of the old law, and that the contracts should be altered only if prices are cut. So the bickering continues, involving every imaginable bureau of the government, from the treasury general counsel's office to the army ordnance division.

VARIETY OF OPINION If the President fails to deal drastically with the situation it will be for three reasons. In the first place, he has never been very sensitive to discussion among his lieutenants. In the second, his inclination has always been to organize defense "through the regular government channels," as he told the cabinet when war first broke out. And, in the third, decision on any course is difficult, since so many people want him to do so many different things.

Support for a strong, centralized defense agency—a real ministry of defense production, with plenary powers and final responsibility—is to be found only with the defense commission itself, where it is naturally advocated. Elsewhere in government there is a tremendous range of opinion. Many officials have schemes for minor improvements in the existing situation. Others, like Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, would like to see the defense commission virtually liquidated and the bulk of its powers returned to the War and Navy Departments. Meanwhile, unless the presidential mind suddenly changes, nothing really important is likely to be done without serious public pressure.

Rare Books.

Having learned there are, in Atlanta, some extremely valuable Dickens' first editions, memories of rare books which have come my way, collectors' items, have been running around the old brain of recent days. Not that personal finances ever permitted ownership of such costly curios, but owners have permitted me, occasionally, to glimpse their treasures.

I was once offered, by a dear old lady who had absolutely no knowledge of the value of the proffered gift, some paper-backed magazines, ages old, which were edited by Dickens. My conscience wouldn't permit me to accept the gift and she absolutely refused to consider parting with them on any other basis. Where they are today I have no idea.

Once upon a time there was a copy of a beautiful edition of Pierre Louys' "Aphrodite" on sale in a second-hand book store. The price was about $20 and, remembering bills owed and home expenses, I resisted the temptation to squander on it. Had to walk around the block three or four times, however, while I fought it out in my own mind.

Resisted, though. Later, told a friend about it and, to my utter surprise and delight, he sent me a copy of the same edition for a present.

Foebly, loaned that book to an imagined trustworthy person, and have never seen it since.

$1,500

For a Book.

A friend telephoned me one morning, before I left the house. Asked if I could call at his office on my way in town. Had something of interest to show me, he said.

He had a book. Absolutely the most gorgeous example of the bookbinding art, and of printing, I ever saw. The text was in French and the illustrations were old-style steel engravings. A big book, it was, with illuminated initials and hand-colored leather, with heavy gold lettering. And so on.

My friend said it wasn't his, but he had been asked to try and find a purchaser for it. He told me this story:

An Atlanta couple married during the period of financial madness, before 1929. Went to Europe for their honeymoon and, in Paris, saw and purchased this book. They paid the equivalent, in French francs, of $1,500 for it.

Since the depression—$1,500 for the book, about six years ago—this couple's financial affairs had taken a turn for the worse. Like everyone else, they weren't finding things too easy. And so wanted to sell some of the foolish things they had previously squandered money on. This book was one of them. They'd be delighted to sell it for one-third what it cost them, or even less.

I don't know if anyone bought it, or not.

Goethe

In 3 Volumes.

Once upon a time, I saw and read a first edition of Goethe's works, in three volumes. Picked 'em up for next to nothing in a second-hand book shop. But the trunk in which I kept them was destroyed in a fire and so that was that.

Once saw a book, owned by a Charlestonian, which was printed some 300 years, or more, ago, and of which not over five copies are still extant. Worth several thousand dollars. Most of you have heard of, or read, later editions of that work, but this was the original.

Also, once upon a time, I saw and read a first edition of Gulliver's Travels. Do you know that, in this first edition, unpurged form, Gulliver would not be permitted on sale today? Utterly immoral, in fact, pornographic. And to think that, in its expurgated form, it is now practically a nursery story.

And there was the occasion, in Louisville, when a friend brought out a story of adventure, an autobiography written several centuries ago. It was about pirates, the Jolly Roger and walking the plank and all that.

And, in the volume, the story of a toast that was drunk was told. The toast was drunk in a concoction named "A Pirate's Nipple," and the recipe was given. My friend had a wonderful cellar full of books, and I found a "Pirate's Nipple" right then and there. And we sipped it. Gosh, it burned with a potency greater than any liquid mixture I ever put lip to.

I have always had a weakness for literary curios, but never the purse to indulge. However, if anyone has some really startlingly rare or odd books to lend, I'd enjoy borrowing and reading them. And I'd return 'em, too. I'm honest, that way.

Twenty-Five

Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Friday, November 19, 1915: "Washington, November 18.—Tentative plans are being considered, Secretary Daniels said today, for two 36,000-ton battleships to be included in the first year's part of the five-year building program congress will be asked to approve."

And Fifty

Years Ago.

From the news columns of Wednesday, November 19, 1890: "It is Senator Gordon. Both houses of the general assembly have said it—by a good majority and on the first ballot."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

(The views expressed here are Mr. Pegler's own.)

More Honors.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—To the historic honors won at Adowa, Caporetto, Guadalajara and Lissa, the dashing invincibles of Benito Mussolini have now added new glories, inflicted by the Greeks in Albania and the British at Taranto, where the Duce's indomitable upheld the famous, if somewhat queer, traditions of their arms. To be sure, the flight of the irresistible in Albania did not equal in magnitude the spectacular advance to the rear which has made Caporetto a name too sacred to be mentioned out in Italy, nor in speed and form with the magnificent feat of footwork achieved at Guadalajara in Spain. But, man for man, the forces which ran the Greeks to exhaustion over the mountains in recent days have no need to apologize to the survivors of Caporetto, and the heroes of Guadalajara will have to admit that they did their running on a faster and straighter track. After all, spirit counts for a great deal in Mussolini's scoring system, and the forces in Albania certainly deserved to be marked.

In earnestness as they tore for home when the fighting started. If there was any blame at all, it belongs to the Duce, in selecting for this contest a terrain in which the roads were narrow and winding and the curves improperly banked. Reports from the Greek side agree that the track was not at all suitable for championship performances. The conquering legions were compelled to slow down on the turns or pitch over the cliffs, and there were bottlenecks in which some of the slower members impeded men behind who were full of run and wanted only road room.

Proud Insigne. So, notwithstanding the fact that an extraordinary proportion of invincibles were caught, the forces involved doubtless will receive from the Duce the cherished right to wear the proud insigne of a cloud of dust, which is awarded to all distinguished regiments of his forces. This device, unlike the battle honors of other nations, is worn between the shoulder blades, where it is most likely to impress an enemy. If it were worn in front, of course, no enemy would ever see it.

Undoubtedly, the Duce's quartermaster department will now be called on for a technical report on the efficiency of a type of running shoe worn by his invincibles, so that they do not know whether, after Guadalajara, when so many casualties were found to be suffering from hobnail wounds in the rear, it was decided to do something to abate this hazard, and rubber spikes were substituted for a time, but were abandoned when the soldiers stewed them in gear grease and ate them for mussels, a great delicacy as long as they lasted. The more daring minds on the Duce's staff proposed long, wicked sprinters' spikes and a mere sheet of a shoe for the utmost speed and a regulation issue of tin-body armor in the sole of the pants to reduce casualties from tamping. But, after all, the imperial legions of the all-conquering will are not mere sprinters. They are distance runners, too, so we do not know whether they were using spikes in Albania where they ran a marathon race.

It is hard to see how Mussolini can conscientiously honor the heroes of the naval engagement at Taranto on an equal scale with those of the old battle of Lissa. It is true that, on net results, they upheld the traditions of Lissa, but, after all, they didn't run away during the action. They had already run away and were hiding at the time, whereas, at Lissa, the Italian fleet not only achieved a historic defeat but followed that with a magnificent flight from the Austrians, comparable, in sea warfare, to the most glorious feats of running ever recorded by the land forces.

If the Duce starts rewarding men for inartistic defeats he will cheapen his honors, and his imperial hosts will begin to seek themselves on the chin just to win medals for their shoulder blades.

In Duce's hosts of land, sea and air, two elements should always be combined in any traditional performance, defeat and flight. Taranto was not entirely in the best tradition.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

NOT SO CHEERFUL LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 18.—There are newspapersmen here attending the annual meeting of executives and managing editors of Associated Press newspapers who have had recent contacts with informed sources in Europe.

The outlook is not so cheerful. This information demonstrates again how very truthful is the amazing Winston Churchill. Recently he told the British people that all that had been gained was survival.

The outlook for the war is for a long, stubborn one with the depletion of England's resources and credits one of the more serious questions.

The British fleet is stretched so thin that it no longer can assure England of maintaining a blockade. And it is stretched so thin that its member ships are the more vulnerable to attack from German submarines. Convoys are not protected, as they must be if the bread line and the supply line generally is to be kept going.

This country is going to be called on for ships and more ships. They will have to be built in this country and, while they are being built, we will have to sell them some of our merchant ships and some more destroyers.

More and more we move into the war. Whether it will come that our navy and air force will go into combat remains to be seen. But more and more we go into the war in sending to the British supplies.

And more and more we see how costly was the loss of the French navy.

THE MACHINERY OF EUROPE Slowly but surely the time will come when we must choose. All the machinery of Europe, literally all of it, is being geared to defeat England.

The time will come when we must enlist mechanics and pilots in the English forces. The time will come when we will have to change the Johnson act and the neutrality act and send our own ships to convoy our own merchant ships.

Those things are ahead of us. All winter is going to be spent by Germany in preparing for the summer campaign. The new tactic seems to be to force the British navy from the Mediterranean. We may expect more moves on the part of the French navy used in behalf of the Italians.

And, as time and fate work it out, the decision will come to us whether we will sit by and see England defeated. It ought to be plain that, when that time does come, we will not have to send men to Europe except for the air force. And when that time comes, it will be interesting, and fateful, to see the choice of the people of this country.

It ought to be plain, too, now that the campaign is over, how very false and foolish it was to assume that either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Willkie could keep us out of war or get into it.

ALREADY IN WAR We are already in the war and we will go farther in until the day when we must decide to use our ships and to use our planes. It may be the process will be gradual. It may be it will not seem so great a decision when the time comes. But it is coming. Great changes are brewing in the world. It seems to be apparent, although no one has written much of it as yet, that a great social revolution is taking place in England along with the war.

If England loses, of course, it will be a generation or more before she can come back. If, indeed, she can come back. If she wins, it is likely that those who saw England in 1938 and 1939 were the last to see the England that was.

England, if she wins, will emerge as a more democratic country. The old caste lines, which were so strong, are being broken. The air raid shelters, the clerks and merchants who have, and who are, piloting the bombers and the fight ships for England, the great failure of the former ruling classes as epitomized by the late Neville Chamberlain, all have had their influence.

POWERFUL GROUPS No one believed Chamberlain personally responsible. All knew he represented the thinking of the most powerful groups in England. And when they proved unprepared for war, the change began.

If England can win, and her victory is important to this country, against whom the war partially is directed now, it may mean a stronger union of the English-speaking peoples, a union which might make for a long, long reign of peace.

Slowly but surely the time draws near when we must make the choice. It will not be a choice as of 1917. This one will be a choice of sea power and air power. After that has been tested there may come another phase. But that is too far ahead.

The outlook is not bright. The outlook is desperate for England. Not that there will be any immediate defeat or loss but in the near future England must have ships of war and commerce to help her. And after that planes, pilots and mechanics.

Their Land Is Doomed When They Hate One Another More Than Their Common Enemy

By ROBERT QUILLEN

A prudent writing man was careful during the campaign to say nothing that would arouse slumbering passions. He made jokes about both parties and both candidates, and he expressed polite disapproval of certain policies, but that was all. And he shuddered when he read or heard the irresponsible and inflammatory words of other men, for they seemed like sparks in a powder mill.

Under all circumstances, the man who harnesses human passions to turn his grindstone is dangerous; if he does it in these times, he may expose his country to something more deadly than the plague.

Under the smooth veneer of civilization, man is still a beast, subject to an unpredictable madness. The madness is compounded of race prejudice and class hatred and jealousy and envy and fear and all base passions. And men overcome by the madness become more and more, and they are more terrible and cruel and merciless than any other animal on the earth.

Unless you have seen the faces of men and women in a mob, you do not know how dreadful and how brutal people can be when reason is gone.

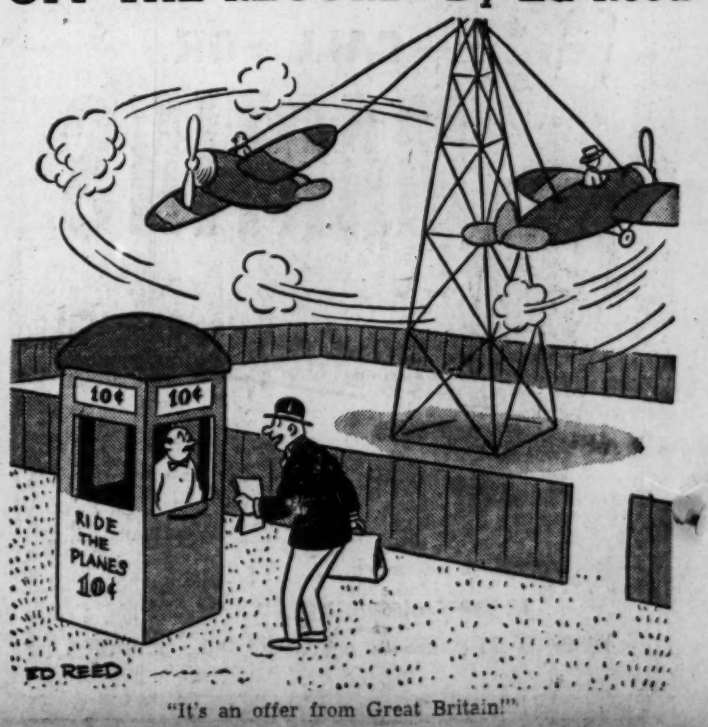

Their faces are flushed or ashen gray. Their eyes glare like those of a wolf in a cage. Their mouths are open and they make strange, inhuman sounds without knowing it. Some retch and are sick and never realize it. They are hypnotized by their own mass passion and utterly incapable of pity. They are killers.

We can scarcely believe that sane men would torture and kill a neighbor because he was religious and prosperous and educated, or that others would kill a neighbor because he was poor and ignorant and irreligious and eager to better his condition, yet thousands in Europe were murdered for these reasons alone when class hatreds destroyed reason.

It can happen here, for we are human, too. Already we have seen men incited to violence against their "class enemies." And nobody knows or can know how much or little more may be enough to inflame passions beyond the limit of self-control. There is no way to limit or direct insanity. One might as well expect laws or words to check a forest fire that is driven by a hurricane.

Our safety depends upon unity. Anybody who would poison our minds and divide us into mobs is a servant of the powers that would destroy us.

Loses Argument, As Always, in a Fireside Chat

The Heart and Soul of our household is a radio fiend. No, she isn't an addict of Amos and Andy—I have heard they're still on the air though I haven't tuned in on them since Roosevelt's second term began—or my favorite Charlie McCarthy. She does like good music, especially if she learns Richard Crooks is going to sing that dream number from "Manon" which he usually does.

Her specialty is newscasts. Local, national, international, network or short wave direct from London or Berlin. She hurries home to catch Kaltenborn, she lets something burn on the stove to get Raymond Gram Swing. I've even heard her listen to Eleanor Roosevelt.

She considers me—and frequently hints as much—an idle moron because I move into the other room and read about how Mr. Tutt went fishing and found a pretty widow and defended a murder case and—of course—won it.

She says the London news says bombing has been heavy over the outskirts of London.

"So what?" I return, coldly.

Keep False Teeth Purified Says Dr. Sherwin

The world progresses—new discoveries make history. Now, thanks to Dr. L. W. Sherwin, a well known authority on oral hygiene, false teeth and dental plates can be made to gleam with purity and immaculate cleanliness with just a 10 minute daily bath, with amazing Stera-Kleen. It's all so easy—just get a 30 cent bottle of Stera-Kleen—drop a pinch in a half glass of lukewarm water—let your dental plate soak in this gleam 10 minutes or overnight, as you choose. Take it out, rinse under the cold water faucet—no brushing is needed.

Then you get a plate free from slimy mucus and stains—a plate sparkling with beauty and glittering with purity. No more dull-looking, murky, dismal false teeth for you—lasts for weeks—30 cents—all drug stores.

"I'll read all about it in the paper tomorrow morning while you're brewing the coffee. I like my news in type."

Out of My Line.

"You should be more interested in world affairs," she insists. "Keep up with the war."

"I'm afraid to," I explain. "My boss hired me to write a column which would lay off the war, politics, household budgets, agricultural problems and how to cure hay fever. He said he had experts to cover those topics."

"He found the right man," she agrees. "You lay off anything that amounts to anything. Now, if you'd just find some other stooge to show up as a dumb Dora—"

"W-e-e-l-l," I return, thinking carefully. "I do know a blonde—not exactly a blonde except at intervals—who offers an interesting study in feminine trends of thought. I could write about her—if I could devote more time to study."

"Oh, go put the dog out," says the other nine-tenths, "and let me get your slippers warmed while you write nice letters to your grandchildren. I'll bet your near-blonde is knitting a sweater for hers, in case they are called in the draft."

There are moments when it is better to suffer in silence. For one grand brings on a dozen. And you know who always utters the last ones.

Information on Tap.

War Department, reports an (P) dispatch, has ordered for the expanding army 1,116,000 pairs of woolen drawers and 1,477,000 woolen undershirts, which causes a query from Owen Montgomery, of Route 8.

"How come it takes more undershirts than drawers?" asks Mr. Montgomery.

This is not a Dr. Quiz department. It may be the War Department is considering the personal tastes of the soldiery. I find nothing in the Articles of War requiring an infantryman—or even a Marine—to wear shorts or long pants that don't show on parade inspection. Trouble with mine is that the buttons bust off. And who sews buttons on in the army? But the modern undershirt—unlike the Marine's—has no buttons. And if it did have buttons and they busted off the garment wouldn't fall down around your knees and impede your progress in a charge with bayonets. Besides that wool scratches—or itches you. That's voodoo with a shirt—but.

I cannot affirm that this is the technical answer to Mr. Montgomery's question but it's the best I can offer on the spur of the moment. But I am forwarding his query to the War Department and hope for a detailed explanation some time in 1946. The department is meticulous about answering queries—when it gets 'round to them.

Gasoline vs. Feet.

Newspaper articles on the new science of war indicate that flat feet or ingrowing toenails will not exempt a man from active service.

As nearly as I can gather, the infantry is expected to undertake no weary marching down muddy roads. Except in emergencies. The infantry will ride—in trucks. The cavalry has been deprived of its horses. Why shouldn't the infantry be taken off its feet? No civilian walks any more, unless he wants to exercise his dog. And the infantryman in the past has exercised his dogs to a fare-you-well.

Final Details of Art Week Exhibits Being Worked Out.

Miss Sayra Baker, student at the High Museum of Art school, was named winner of the city-wide poster contest yesterday in connection with plans for Art Week.

Miss Baker's poster was one of almost a hundred submitted by students at this school, at Georgia Tech, and the classes in the Atlanta high schools.

The poster will be reproduced by the WPA and displayed throughout the city during Art Week, beginning November 25.

The poster contest was concluded as painters, sculptors and craftsmen completed work on entries for the huge public sales exhibit which will be held at 60 Peachtree street during the week, instead of Taft hall, as had been planned before the auditorium fire.

Final details of the exhibit were being worked out yesterday and Julian Harris, state chairman for Art Week, and Mrs. Murdock Equen, Atlanta chairman, said the selection and hanging committee would meet Friday and Saturday to pass on the entries.

The week was set aside nationally as a period when all communities will become acquainted with the work of their local artists. All work on display during the week will be for sale. The goal of the week is a piece of original American art in every home, school, club and office.

Army Needs 18 Months To Outfit-Drum

Generals Confer Here on Plans for Training First Army.

It will be another year and a half before the United States will be able to completely outfit its planned army of 1,400,000 men, Lieutenant General Hugh A. Drum, commanding general of the Fifth Army and Second Corps Area, said here yesterday.

Accompanied by his aide, Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin Caffey, General Drum arrived early yesterday for a several-hour conference with Brigadier General J. P. Smith, commanding officer of the Fourth Corps Area regarding training plans for First Army troops stationed in the area. Also present at the meeting were several corps area staff officers and Major General Walter C. Short, of Fort Jackson, S. C., commander of the army's first tactical corps.

First army troops are stationed along the Atlantic seaboard, from Maine to Georgia, according to General Drum. Troops to be trained at Camp Stewart, the anti-aircraft firing center near Savannah will be included in Drum's command.

Drum reported he was well pleased with progress being made in absorbing National Guard troops into the regular army, and at the efficient preparations for training of draftees. Preparations for the peacetime draft "are moving along better than the 1917 draft," he said.

been revealed regarding the subjects of today's conferences, German political quarters said speedy agreement was reached on questions already raised at Hitler's previous meetings with Pierre Laval and Marshal Petain of France and Generalissimo Franco of Spain.

(Rome circles suggested that a main problem at the Berchtesgaden meeting was to reconcile Russia and Spain, as the absence of diplomatic relations between Moscow and Madrid was an impediment to Axis plans for a "new order" in Europe and Africa.)

Further French Parleys.

It was reported that further conversations with French statesmen may occur shortly. France's large holdings in north and west Africa would, of course, have an important bearing on the Axis "new order" program.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop participated with Hitler in the conferences, which were held both individually and jointly with the Italian and Spanish representatives. General Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, head of the German high command, also was at the chateau.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backaches quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills. Used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Court Refuses To Review Two Labor Orders

Rules Picketing Legal Despite Alleged Sherman Act Violation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The supreme court today ruled that a Chicago labor union was free to carry on picketing activities even though the activities were alleged to interfere with interstate commerce.

A unanimous decision by Justice Black held in effect that the Norris-LaGuardia act (barring courts from issuing injunctions in labor disputes except in certain circumstances) took precedence over the Sherman act (barring actions which restrain interstate commerce).

The court also refused to review two cases challenging controversial orders of the labor board, thereby leaving the orders in force.

Unfair Practice.

One order held that the Elkland Leather Company, of Elkland, Pa., had committed an unfair labor practice by distributing to employees, with their pay checks, this written statement:

"You are under no obligation to join any union and cannot be forced to do so as this tannery will always operate as an open shop. This company will deal individually with any employee that wishes to do so at any time."

The issue of freedom of speech was raised but a federal circuit court upheld the board's condemnation of the expression as unfair. The supreme court declined to review this decision even though Solicitor General Biddle, for the government, did not oppose a review.

Only 56 Voted.

The other board order involved certification of a union as collective bargaining agent at the New York Handkerchief Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, on the strength of an election in which only 56 of the 225 eligible employees had voted.

In its only other decision today the court held that Wilson & Co., Chicago meat packer, was not entitled to recover $219,000 of claiming taxes in a court of claims suit. The company had sought return of the tax, paid on exported products, but the high tribunal held that a contrary determination by the commissioner of internal revenue was final.

BRIEFS CHALLENGED BLACK TOM AWARDS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The validity of $50,000,000 of damage awards made by the German-American mixed claims commission as a result of the Black Tom and Kingsland, N. J., munitions explosions was challenged today in briefs filed with the supreme court.

They were presented as a prelude to oral arguments during the week beginning December 9. The supreme court granted a review on October 14.

The awards were made against Germany in 1939 to 153 American claimants.

Council Asked To Seek Grady Bonds Again

New Move Started To Improve Hospital Building.

The 1941 city council yesterday was asked to authorize a new bond issue for Grady hospital in order to modernize and fire-proof the present structure.

The four-line resolution, offered by Alderman Frank H. Reynolds and Councilman Frank Wilson, merely called on the 1941 council to act for a Grady bond issue.

No amount was specified, but Wilson later said it would require $4,000,000 "to do a jam-up job for Grady."

He reiterated that further delay in rebuilding the old structure which has been condemned as a fire trap for the past several years, will imperil the safety of scores of patients.

Last week he asserted that a fire there probably would be accompanied by "appalling loss of lives of bed-ridden patients and that no amount of money we could then give to reconstructing the ancient buildings would bring a single dead patient back to life."

Dramatic Story Of Defense Is Seen on Graph

Shows Number of Men Air Corps Needs, Other Data.

By DEVON FRANCIS.
Associated Press Aviation Editor.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—On a sheet of paper tacked to the wall of the War Department office is being unfolded one of the most dramatic stories of the nation's defense drive.

It is one of those finely-lined sheets containing thousands of tiny squares, used by business houses to trace sales records.

The Air Corps is using it to show the number of young men needed, from month to month, to swell its pilot strength toward an ultimate objective of 12,000 freshly-trained airmen a year.

More important, the chart carries a continuous picture of the number of young men available and the number actually put into uniform.

Those lines, angling upward on the chart, are full of theatrical suspense because the War Department is not quite sure that the supply of American citizens qualified (and willing) to take Air Corps training will continue, as at present, to exceed the demand.

That demand is going up.

Only two years ago the Air Corps was satisfied when from 260 to 275 "flying cadets" entered training every three months. On November 30 a total of 1,400 must enter training if the Air Corps is to maintain its training schedule.

By next February a "peak load" of 2,383 men must enter uniform each five weeks. By that time the Air Corps hopes to have 5,720 men ready to enter training—to cover the current class, the class to follow, and allow for a reduction of the total number available from such unforeseen causes as illness, accidents and marriage.

Marrying automatically disqualifies a man from becoming a flying cadet.

From 55 to 60 per cent of the initiates will complete their courses and be given reserve commissions in the Army. The rest will be "washed out," found wanting—during the course of instruction.

The problem of Air Corps flying cadet procurement stems from the fact that while a citizen may be drafted to fight for his country, he cannot be compelled to learn to fly.

This problem potentially is the most serious man-power problem the Army faces.

Miller, Shaw Called to Stand In Glover Trial

Appraiser Sets Cost of Houses Built for Camp Warden.

Still introducing government witnesses as the trial of J. G. (Bugs) Glover entered its third week, United States Attorney Lawrence S. Camp yesterday called W. L. Miller, chairman of the State Highway Board, and Joseph S. Shaw, house appraiser, to the stand for questioning by himself and rigorous cross-examinations by Defense Attorney Paul Carpenter.

Glover is on trial on a 20-count indictment, charging that three houses he had constructed on land he owned adjacent to state prison camps cost Georgia taxpayers approximately $10,000. The houses were built as homes for camp wardens while the defendant was superintendent of state convict forces.

Shaw, who said he had appraised around 12,000 houses in the last 10 years, set the cost of the house Glover built in Dade county at $3,319, and the cost of the warden's house in Dawson county at $3,929. He was not asked the value of the house in Miller county.

Power Plant Not Included. Cost of the electric power plant near the Dade county house was not included in the valuation.

Value of warden's homes built on land leased by the Highway Board Shaw set at $1,080 for the Soperton camp, $1,796 for the house at Lakeland camp and $2,015 for the one at Hortense.

"Did you take into consideration the fact that convict labor was used to build the homes?" Carpenter asked.

Shaw replied that he had not.

Questioned by Carpenter, Shaw said he expected a fee of $25 a day from the government for his services as appraiser and witness.

Stating that about 75 per cent of the value of a house was lost when it was torn down, hauled away and rebuilt, Highway Board Chairman Miller disagreed with Board Member L. L. Patten, who testified last week that it was the board's practice to remove all buildings when state camps were abandoned.

Written Leases Customary. Miller said that it was customary to obtain written leases from landowners before prison camps were built, and in the absence of specific provisions the board understood the buildings remained after the camps were moved.

Camp used Miller's testimony in an attempt to prove that in the case of nine warden's houses at various state camps, six were built after lease arrangements, while Glover built three on land he owned.

Glover's houses were built during the period that Miller was fighting in the courts for his chairmanship after his ejection by Governor Rivers. He knew nothing of the defendant's activities until postal inspectors told him about it, he said.

"Did the board have any plan or practice regarding the building of warden's houses?" Judge E. Marvin Underwood asked Miller.

"No definite specifications," Miller replied. "Our purpose was to build as cheaply as we could."

"As permanent or temporary structures?" Camp asked.

Miller said.

After questions by Carpenter showed he knew little about the Lakeland camp, Miller explained that since his reinstatement on the board he had little authority.

"How much equipment has the camp?" Carpenter asked.

"Too much," was the reply.

Do you know Atlanta? Do you know it well enough to identify and write a 25-word description of this building, an unusual architectural feature of which is pictured in an adjoining column?

If so, mail in your answer to The Constitution's Contest Editor immediately. Your letter will be compared with others received, judged for information and correctness, and the winner will be mailed a $1 bill. In case of a tie the letter with the earliest postmark will be declared winner.

Section of the state capitol run yesterday was correctly identified by most of the contestants, but Ellen Douglass, who works across the street, remembers the thing that makes it outstanding among public buildings.

On completion of the capitol, "there was an amount of $187 left to turn back into the state treasury," she wrote, clinching a dollar for herself. The bill will be mailed her at 523 State Office building today.

2 Schools Get Dual-Control Training Car

Presentation Is Made by the Atlanta Motor Club.

A new dual-control training car was presented Tech High and Boys' High schools yesterday afternoon by the Atlanta Motor Club, sponsor of student driving in the local schools.

These two high schools were the first in the entire south to make automobile driving part of their regular curricula, this term marking the beginning of the fourth year's work. Similar courses are now used in more than 2,000 high schools throughout the United States under the sponsorship of the American Automobile Association as part of their safety program.

In the two local schools, driver training has been taught to approximately 1,000 pupils, and, according to State Highway Patrol records, students completing the course make an average grade of 85 per cent—a mark about 20 per cent higher than run-of-mill applicants for drivers' licenses.

Since the beginning of the fall term students have been engaged in classroom work covering the theory of driving, traffic regulations and problems, car construction and similar topics and are now ready for real "road work" in the dual-control car, which started Monday at Boys' High under the direction of Claude E. Lynn and at Tech High under W. H. Dows.

Explosive Found In Edison Plant

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A piece of iron pipe loaded with firing apparatus and powder which police said made it about equivalent to a firecracker was found in a Consolidated Edison Company plant today several hours after police had received a tip that an explosive would be placed in the building.

In the pipe was part of a small flashlight bulb filled with gunpowder, a small electric battery and a printed note reading, "There is no shortage of powder, boys."

Police said the apparatus was capable of making a noise but did not contain enough powder to do any damage. They expressed belief it might have been the work of a "crank."

TONTO AND THE LONE RANGER

CHAPTER 11

It was noon when the Texas Ranger again opened his eyes in the cave where he lay wounded. Tonto, the Indian, was beside him watching with his typical patience. A small fire burned steadily and there was hot broth ready. Its fragrant aroma filled the cave. Without a word, Tonto filled a tin cup with the beverage and held it for the wounded man.

The Texas Ranger sipped it slowly and felt new strength coursing through his veins. When he finished, he tried to speak, but Tonto held up a hand admonishingly. "You listen," the Indian said. "Tonto talk."

The Texas Ranger nodded. "Tonto go back where shooting happen," he said. Then he went on to explain that he had found the saddle bags and tools of the dead men and had dug graves for each of them.

He explained further, that if the outlaws knew one of the Texas Ranger's band had survived they would be on guard. If, on the other hand, they thought that all seven of the men had perished, they would feel free of any danger of reprisal. So Tonto had buried the six men, but seven mounds of earth surrounded by crude crosses were visible in the gap.

"You," he told the wounded man, "free to get revenge now. No one know that you live."

The white man nodded grimly. "So," he said, "the others were all killed."

Tonto nodded. "While I was left alive. The only survivor, the Lone Texas Ranger, to capture those killers."

"You," said Tonto, "You Lone Ranger!"

There, in the cave half way up the side of the steep slope, the Lone Ranger was named by the Indian who was to become his steadfast friend.

"If I wear a mask," he said, "and not let anyone see my face, no one will know who I am. If they look upon me as an outlaw, it won't matter a great deal, I'll be all the better able to find out who ambushed our band and why."

Tonto nodded. He grinned slightly and his brown hand reached beneath his shirt. "That," he said, "what Tonto think." His hand came out holding a black mask. "Mask all ready. Now you get well plenty quick. Then you and Tonto ride!"

"But," replied the Lone Ranger, "my horse left me. A horse that was the finest I have ever seen. I can't understand why Silver would have run away."

"Tonto know where Silver wait," the Indian replied. "You get um well, Tonto bring back Silver. Horse wait in pasture not far away."

The Lone Ranger held out his hand to grip that of the Indian.

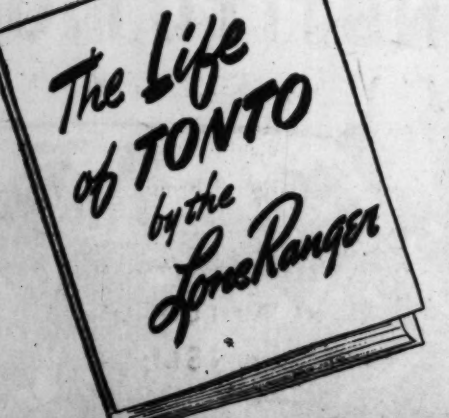

"The last time we met," he said, "we found that our trails were different, but now those trails seem to have met again. From now on—"

"From now," the Indian repeated, "we ride same trail. You, Lone Ranger, and Tonto always ride together."

Breakfast Nook Drama Hints at Big Surprise

Read Thursday's Constitution To Learn What Helen Knows.

(The scene: Any Atlanta breakfast table. The time: Today. The players: Joe Doakes and his wife, Helen. Joe is hidden behind the morning paper, his hand now and then reaching out, groping for his coffee cup. Helen, across the table, looks bored as her eyes travel idly over the back page.)

Helen (rather sharply)—"Joe," Joe—"Huh?"

Helen—"Let me see half the paper, will you?"

Joe—"Just a minute, sugar, and you can have it all."

Helen—"I don't want it all, dope. I just want part of it."

(Joe grunts and continues reading. Helen frowns, taps her foot and seems about to speak when, as Joe turns a page, she sees something that seems to excite her.)

"Joe," she says eagerly, all anger gone from her voice. "Turn back a page. See—that little ad. What does it say?"

Joe reads—"It just says 'the fireworks start in Thursday's Constitution.' What fireworks? It doesn't make sense to me."

Helen seems to be remembering something. Then her eyes light up. She reaches to the shelf behind her and takes down a little teapot with a broken spout. She starts taking out money, ones mostly, and a couple of fives, and some change. She counts it quickly. Then she says softly, half to herself:

"Maybe not to you. But it makes sense to me. Joe, just like it did last year, and the year before, and the year before that."

(She gets up and goes out, humming softly. The tune strangely is "Jingle Bells." Joe looks after her, wondering, as the curtain falls.)

BARS FOREIGN TALK.

Perhaps Australia's most unusual wartime regulation has been the prohibition of use of any foreign language over the government operated telephone system.

"If a person cannot talk English, he cannot use the telephone," is the order. Even French is barred.

The Rev. Woolsey Couch will officiate and burial will be in West View cemetery under the direction of J. Austin Diller.

Books Can Help You Get Dates, Librarian Says

The time-tried fundamentals of salesmanship—know your wares and know what the consumer wants—can be applied to dates, and Miss Alma Jamison, reference librarian of the Carnegie Library, will show that books are full of that proof tonight at 8 o'clock when she speaks on "Dating—A Social Problem" in the library of the Jewish Educational Alliance.

The speech will be the first in the intermediate series of the "Institute for Better Living" and Miss Jamison, who, as reference librarian, knows where the problems of 14 to 17-year-old boys and girls are discussed in books, current and classic, was asked to tell what writers offer the best advice.

Recommend Emerson.

In the "know your wares" division of the discussion, Miss Jamison heartily recommends Emerson's essay on "The Over-soul." But all reading matter for boys and girls who want to make a success of dating is not quite so heavy.

"If a boy or girl will give up 15 minutes a day in getting acquainted with themselves, and really concentrate on the three fundamental varieties—beauty, goodness and truth—he will find that practicing self-control and correcting faults is not such a large order," she said.

After this young folks should look to their "instruments of distribution" when selling themselves, and here's where more books will be of help.

Available for sale are "The Over-soul," "It's Fun to Keep Fit," and a book called "New Bodies for Old" are some that are recommended. As for winning popularity with the "Constitution," "Please—A Clinic for Talkers," and "Speak for Yourself," should help dates a lot, Miss Jamison thinks.

Manners Solved.

Then there is the problem of manners, with "Cues for Conversation" and "Gentlemanly Behavior," offered as helpful hints to young gadsabouts.

And for the girls, there are books on cosmetics and make-up: "Any Girl Can Be Goodlooking," "Susan Be Smooth," and "Designing Women," to mention a few on Miss Jamison's list.

In addition, smart boys and girls will read at least one weekly magazine and one daily newspaper, if they want to get their man, or girl, the librarian declares. "After all," she said, "there are books that solve all problems."

The man who wants to fix your place up advertises in the "Business Service" classification in the Want Ads of The Constitution.

Two School Girls Being Sought Here

Two Russell High school girls, one 18 and the other 14, were being sought yesterday by county police after the girls reportedly had run away.

The missing students were Marie LeCrox, 18, and Gloria Byrum, 14, both of Ben Hill.

County police said the girls left a note at Russell High saying they were running away. School officials asked help of the county officers in locating them. Both girls are brunets and the older one was described as being about 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing about 130 pounds. The younger girl, dressed in riding breeches, was said to be 5 feet 4 inches tall and to weigh about 100 pounds.

Qualified Jurors' Record Authorized

A permanent card index record of persons not qualified to serve on juries was authorized yesterday by the Fulton superior court judges at the request of the jury commission which is now in the process of revising the jury lists.

The jury commissioners said it was found that names removed from the lists sometimes get back when they are picked up from the taxpayers' rolls. The card index system of those ineligible to serve will keep names off the lists, they said. The commission began revising the lists in August and will complete the work about the end of the year.

G. M. Hicks Makes Bond In Cobb Affidavit Case

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. MARIETTA, Ga., Nov. 18.—George M. Hicks, former railroad detective, under felony charges for inducing two Mariettans to sign false affidavits in connection with the Peek case trial here last week, has made bond of $1,000 in each case, Sheriff George McMillan said today.

Hicks was indicted in two bills on charges of inducing Paul Howard and Lloyd Howard to sign false affidavits to support defense counsel contention that Chappell could not receive a fair trial in Cobb superior court. The Chappell case has since been closed.

House Approves Change In Tobacco Parity Base

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(P)—The House passed and sent to the White House today a bill to change the base period for computing parity payments on flue-cured and burley tobacco from 1919-29 to 1934-39.

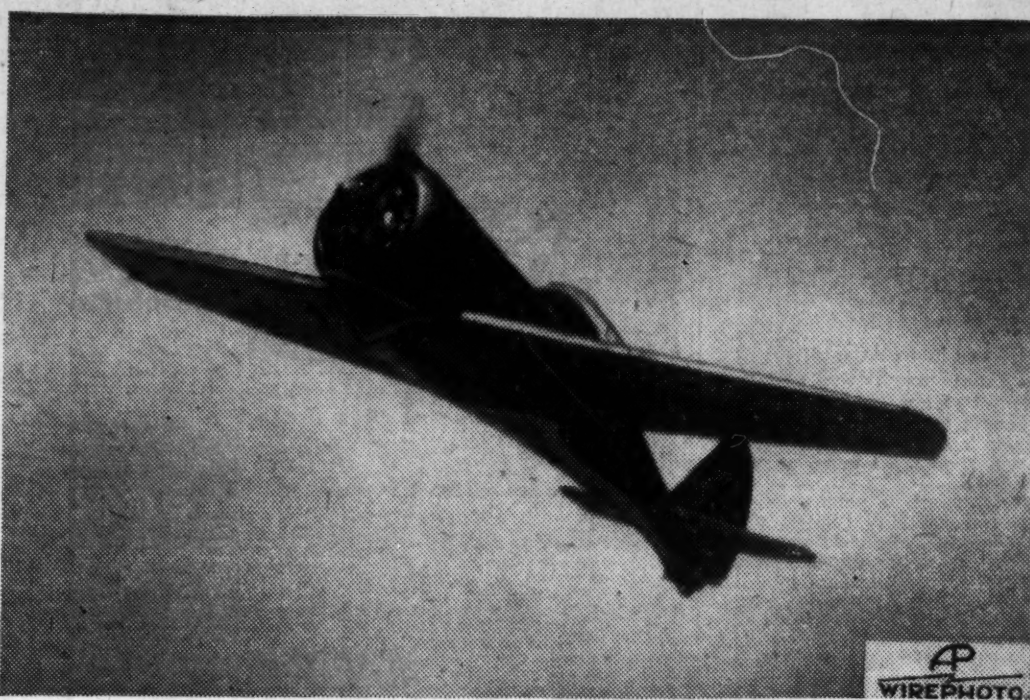

Tobacco belt representatives estimated the change would result in increasing the parity price of burley tobacco from 17 to 21.8 cents a pound, and flue-cured from about 18 to 22.4 cents a pound.

The measure also separates for the purpose of the AAA act flue-cured and dark air-cured tobaccos, which are now grouped together under the act.

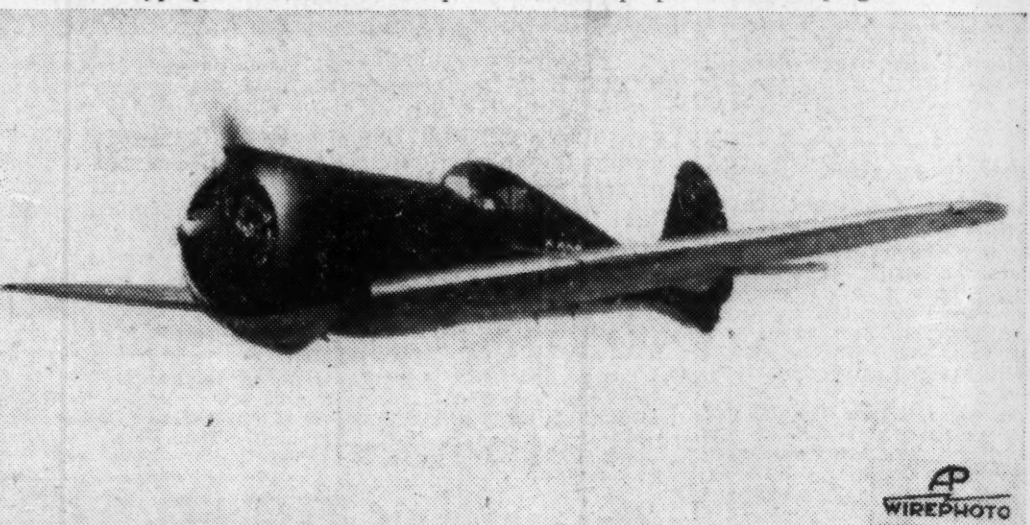

The change in base periods will not become effective until the 1941-42 season.

MILE-A-MINUTE CLIMBERS—Designed to intercept bombing planes before they can reach their objective, the new Curtiss-Wright interceptor-fighter is shown here in climbing position, rising more than a vertical mile in 60 seconds. Small but vicious, these new type planes are another step in America's preparedness campaign.

DECEIVING GROUND CREWS—The plane, which will be demonstrated today at ground-breaking ceremonies for a new airplane factory in St. Louis, is leveling off in the above picture. The deceptive sound of the plane's engine makes it difficult for ground crews to spot it during flight. The landing wheels fold sideways into wings.

Warehousesmen Protest New Bids

MACON, Ga., Nov. 18.—(P)—A move by the Commodity Credit Corporation to invite new bids on the storage of government loan cotton has drawn the protest of the Warehousemen Association.

The group passed a resolution yesterday objecting to the proposal and called on unaffiliated warehousemen to wire protests to their congressmen and senators.

R. C. Neely, of Waynesboro, president of the association; T. E. Fletcher, of Cordele, secretary, and L. E. Floyd, of LaGrange, treasurer, said they would appear before the corporation in Washington.

Fletcher said the call for new and lower bids would result in a removal of the cotton from inland warehouses near mills to large port warehouses.

Civil Service Bill Conferees Agree

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(P)—A joint house-senate committee reached a compromise agreement today on legislation authorizing the President to bring back to the 200,000 federal employees under civil service after non-competitive examinations.

The agreement cleared the way for final action by both houses tomorrow.

Both house and senate had passed the measure in different form, and a previous compromise had been rejected by the house.

One of the points of controversy was cleared up when the senate conferees agreed to eliminate an amendment which would have substituted fingerprints for photographs in connection with civil service examinations.

Newspapermen Defy Dangers Of War-Cooper

AP Chief Tells Managing Editors of Hardships in Europe.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 18.—(P)—Managing editors of Associated Press member newspapers today heard one speaker describe the hard work and physical strain of gathering war news and were told by another that the federal wage-hour law was not a threat to freedom of the press.

Kent Cooper, general manager of the news-gathering co-operative, told editors attending their eighth annual national conference that news men on the job in Europe are working "under the greatest strain" in the history of reporting. Despite dangers they constantly face, he said, they have acquitted themselves well.

Tom Wallace, editor of the Louisville Times, discussed the war-hour law's application to newspapers and declared: "Freedom of the press means freedom of expression and not freedom to run a sweat shop."

Much of the afternoon program was devoted to special, including discussions by AP Sports Editor Herbert Barker; AP Sports Cartoonist Tom Paprocki; Coleman Harwell, editor of the Nashville Tennessean; Earl Ruby, sports editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, and Waldo Arnold, managing editor of the Milwaukee Journal.

Other speakers who discussed news in their own fields were Claude Jagger, AP financial editor; M. J. Wing, AP feature service editor; John Evans, in charge of the organization's far-flung foreign service, and Brian Bell, chief of the Washington bureau.

Byron Price, executive news editor of the AP, urged member newspapers to aid in developing more domestic news to lighten war news.

Neil Swanson, of the Baltimore Sun; Ralph McGill, of The Atlanta Constitution; Palmer Hoyt, of the Portland Oregonian and W. W. Raynolds, of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, took part in a forum with Bell. J. N. Heiskell, of the Arkansas Gazette, Little Rock, discussed writing style.

Ruby suggested a national sports editors' association to meet annually in conjunction with managing editors for interchange of ideas.

Congress Changes AAA 'Yield' Rule

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(P)—Legislation designed to expedite the yearly determination of the "normal yield" of corn, wheat and cotton farms was passed by the house today and sent to the White House.

An amendment to the farm act of 1938, the measure would remove the necessity of waiting until the current year's yields are recorded before determining the normal yield for the next year. Normal yields form the basis upon which acreage quotas are set.

A committee report said the bill would enable farmers to get their normal yield figures for 1941 several months earlier than would be possible under existing law.

It was addressed to Selective Service Board No. 1, Persons Building, Macon. Inside was a completed questionnaire, on which the last day of grace was today.

Is Smaller. However, Than on Same Date in 1939.

State Auditor Zach Arnold reported yesterday that the University of Georgia had a current fund deficit of $31,906.58 on June 30, 1940, as compared with $42,533.32 on June 30, 1939.

He also pointed out that during the year the university spent $536.49 for motor vehicle public liability and property damage insurance and added that payment for liability insurance is not authorized by law.

In an audit of the Georgia Co-operative Association, Arnold said the net profit to the organization for the period covered by the report was $1,626.28.

An audit of the University of Georgia Press listed sales of $32,783 and expenses of $35,795.

U. D. C. Meeting Opens Tonight In Montgomery

Montgomery Thronged; Statue of Davis To Be Unveiled.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 18. (AP)—This historic southern capital was thronged tonight with women whose aim is to perpetuate the memory of their gallant forebears of the Confederate army—here for the 47th annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Approximately 350 official delegates had registered tonight, but the presence of many other visitors led convention leaders to believe that their original estimate of 1,000 delegates and others would stand. First formal session will be held tomorrow night.

Meanwhile, early arrivals participated in pre-convention festivities, which included visits to the Jefferson Davis home and other historic spots, as well as the modern southeastern air corps training center headquarters at Maxwell field.

Feature of tomorrow's program and one of the convention's principal services will be the unveiling of the statue of Jefferson Davis, with Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, as speaker. The statue has been erected on the front lawn of the state capital, near where the C. S. A. President took his oath.

TWO DIED HERE—Engineer E. B. Mercier and Fireman Paul M. Johnson, both of Macon, were killed in this wreck of a Southern Railway fast train, the Kansas City-Florida Special, at Pine Grove, near Jesup. The locomotive and five cars overturned when the train struck a switch.

Railway Officials Investigate Wreck

PINE GROVE, Ga., Nov. 18. (AP)—Southern Railway officials today investigated the wreck near here of a Kansas City-Jacksonville passenger train in which the engineer and fireman were killed.

Engineer E. B. Mercer, 54, of Macon, Ga., was killed when the engine overturned and five cars were derailed early yesterday. Three cars remained on the track. Paul M. Johnson, of Macon, 40-year-old fireman, died in a hospital later.

Chief Dispatcher E. H. Lawler said the wreck occurred when the engine struck a switch. No passengers were reported hurt.

"We don't know exactly what happened beyond the fact that the train was wrecked at a switch," Lawler said.

Dewey Being Investigated by Proxy—Gurney

Complains as Group Inquires Into Alleged Wire-Tapping.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. (AP)—A complaint by Senator Gurney, Republican, South Dakota, that District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, was being investigated "by proxy" wound up today's session of a senate Interstate Commerce committee which is inquiring into alleged wire-tapping.

Although the committee had been called into session to investigate rumors that the telephone lines of supreme court justices were tapped in 1938, no evidence directly involving this angle was given.

The committee heard some testimony bearing on the question whether or not Robert C. LaBorde, head of the investigators' technical service of New York, was involved in wire-tapping activities.

One witness said that Ernest W. Dowd, New York police captain, had told him LaBorde once was employed by Dewey, but that Dewey had made it known that he wanted to obtain evidence against LaBorde and indict him if possible for wire-tapping.

At New York, Dewey commented tonight, "As has been repeatedly stated by this office, LaBorde has never been a member of Mr. Dewey's staff."

When the ruddy-faced Dowd denied having made such statements and was contradicted by another witness, Gurney broke in to observe that most of the inquiries appeared to be leading toward the New York district attorney.

"I wonder if Mr. Dewey has been notified that he is under examination here by proxy, so to speak?" Gurney inquired.

Housing Officials Convene in Macon

MACON, Ga., Nov. 18. (AP)—More than 50 directors of housing authorities in six southeastern states and national housing officials opened a three-day conference here today.

Principal speakers during the afternoon session were John P. Broome, director of Region IV, United States Housing Authority, and Joe Fowler, member of the defense housing co-ordinator's staff, both of Washington.

Fowler told how local authorities can aid in the national defense housing program and urged co-operation of USHA members.

H. R. Emory, of Wilmington, N. C., told the directors that rent plans "must be fitted to the individual projects" and that the rental fees and methods of collection will vary with the different communities.

Ack Cutler, executive director of the Macon Housing Authority, was in charge of the forum on rental problems and income limitations. Speakers included W. R. Geddings, Columbia, S. C.; J. C. deHoll, of Birmingham, Ala., and Bob Heath, of Augusta.

Russell Tames His Views on Married Life

More in Favor of Divorce Now, Says Criticized Philosopher.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18. (AP)—Bertrand Russell has changed his views on marriage and morals which cost him a college teaching post and raised a storm of controversy here early this year.

The British educator-philosopher-lecturer said in an interview today that he was now "more inclined to favor divorce and less inclined to favor the continuance of unhappy marriages of the 'let's-make-the-best-of-it' type."

He insisted, however, that he still held to most of his original beliefs expressed in his book, "Marriage and Morals."

Russell's viewpoint on morals evoked a wave of protest last February when his appointment as professor of philosophy at the College of the City of New York was announced.

The incident was settled October 21 when the board of higher education gave up its fight to retain the philosopher in the face of a state supreme court decision invalidating his appointment.

Russell, currently lecturing at Harvard University, was in New York to address a Town Hall audience.

Show Employee Clawed To Death by Two Lions

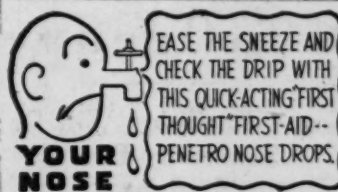

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 18. (AP) George (Abe) Martin, 60-year-old carnival employee, died in a hospital here tonight several hours after he had been clawed and bitten by two lions.

Martin, a native of Hot Springs, Ark., had spent most of his life in the show business.

The lions grabbed Martin through their cage bars as he was putting up wooden sides for the night. Fellow showmen at the World of Mirth winter quarters, who were attracted by Martin's cries, found each of the big cats gripping an arm and had almost pulled the man into the cage.

YOU and Mrs. J. Smatherington Brown may be surprised to learn that you personally are giving aid and comfort to fifth columnists.

Here's how it happens:

Yesterday's papers duly announced that Such-and-Such Civic-Betterment Association would meet tonight at This-or-That school auditorium.

Tomorrow's papers will record the fact that the meeting was presided over by Mrs. J. Smatherington Brown and that the eminent Dr. Fuzzy of the Gloom School of Economics spoke at length on the theme that "advertising is a waste of money."

Now the newspapers must report such things. It is the job of a free press to keep you informed accurately of what is going on in the world. How else would you learn the facts by which you, citizens in a democracy, are able to govern yourselves?

But let's get back to the fifth column. Mrs. Brown also learned from today's papers that a new-model radio set, better than last year's, can be had for $3.95 less. She also learned that Blimp's Store was offering sheets at 20¢ under the regular price and that the Nifty Grocery and Fruit Markets could save her 40¢ on her food purchases this afternoon.

NOTE: The purpose of these regular Tuesday institutional advertisements is to make American life and American business better. Your suggestions, criticisms or reactions will be appreciated by the Newspaper Publishers Committee and its chairman. Address the committee in care of the Business Office of this paper.

Navy Discloses Sites of Bases To Be Built on British Territory

London Agrees On Area U. S. Is To Occupy

Some Facilities Will Be Shared by Two Nations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(UP)—The Navy tonight disclosed sites for air and naval bases that will be constructed on a chain of British possessions extending from Newfoundland to the northern tip of South America.

The sites, to be leased for 99 years, were obtained from Great Britain in the recent swap for 50 over-age destroyers.

Sites and rights have been ceded at Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, Antigua, San Lucia, British Guiana and Newfoundland, the Navy revealed. It said that facilities at Trinidad still are under consideration.

British Agree. The disclosure followed a London announcement that agreements had been reached on the sites.

In a formal statement, the Navy said it "has been informed that all the British authorities concerned have now agreed" on the sites which were selected by a joint Army-Navy board headed by Rear Admiral John W. Green.

Sites on all the British possessions except those at Newfoundland and Bermuda were a direct part of the destroyers-for-bases swap. Those at Newfoundland and Bermuda were turned over gratuitously by the British, it was revealed, at the time the deal was announced.

To Share Fields. The navy announcement disclosed that airfields established by the United States in Jamaica also will be used by British military aircraft, "the controlling authorities to have the first call on the available accommodation."

It also was revealed that the United States has been given the right to develop resources and facilities for Jamaica's Port Royal dockyard, which will be under British control, but will be available for joint use by United States and British forces.

Here is the lineup of base sites and other facilities:

Bermuda Plans.—Land plans, base on Long Bird island, seaplane base, naval base and garrison area on St. David's island; explosive storage facilities on small islands between St. David's and Hamilton islands. The right to substitute a drawbridge between St. George's island and Coney island to make the entrance to Castle harbor usable for vessels and seaplanes. Still under consideration is the question of "the granting of facilities affecting an island or islands in the great sound for operation of seaplanes," the Navy said.

Bahamas.—The right to use waters of Abrahams bay and a small area of adjacent land on Mayaguana island.

Jamaica.—Fleet anchorage at Portland bight; land area to include Goat island and adjacent cays of approximately 33 square miles in the east of Gallion harbor; an area on Portland bight and Portland island for location of defense batteries; about 10 acres in the vicinity of Williams Field station for recreational purposes and a hospital mess; a one-square-mile area along Bakers canal for use as an emergency and auxiliary landing field.

Seaplane Base.—Antigua—U. S. lease of an area on Parham sound opposite Long island and a "narrow peninsula known as Crabs on the east of Parham harbor." The Navy said it would not reveal how this area would be used.

St. Lucia.—Seaplane base on Gros Islet bay. The question of granting further facilities on this island is still under consideration. British Guiana—Patrol plane squadron base with aerodrome 25 miles up the River Demerara; seaplane base near Suddie on the River Essequibo.

Newfoundland.—Air base and Army training ground on Argyle peninsula, naval base on St. John's harbor, including about 1,250 feet of wharfage for handling supply stores and equipment; site for Army defensive force north of Quidi Vidi lake.

The Navy did not say when work on the bases would begin. It was said in London, however, that preliminary work probably would be started soon.

Queen Mary Scorns Luftwaffe, Sallies Forth for Yule Shopping

LONDON, Nov. 18.—(UP)—The Queen Mary donned one of her famous toques the other day, gathered up her old-fashioned umbrella and handbag, stepped into her old-fashioned, high-riding automobile and sallied forth from her country residence to do her annual Christmas shopping.

Little things like Hitler's invasion threats or Goering's Luftwaffe were not going to prevent her keeping her yearly schedule of early shopping for the thousands and one gifts she must purchase for family and friends.

The shopping trip typified the attitude of Britain's "grand old lady"—now 73—toward the war. Queen Mary—she detests the title of Queen Mother—is Britain's No. 1 evacuee. Even before the war she moved to one of her houses in western Britain, where, among completely rural surroundings, she maintains a small and unobtrusive court and has become

WHAT U. S. GOT FOR SHIPS.—These are the bases the United States received in exchange for 50 destroyers sent to Great Britain recently. Map shows the location of air and naval sites in Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, Antigua, St. Lucia, and British Guiana, which were disclosed yesterday. The sites are: Bermuda, east end of colony; Bahamas, an outlying island of Mayaguana; Jamaica, Portland Bight, on south coast about 25 miles west of Kingston; Antigua, near Parham Harbor, on the north coast; St. Lucia, Gros Islet Bay, at north end of island; British Guiana, on the bank of Demarara river, about 25 miles from the sea.

Plan To Send U. S. Ships to Tangier Denied

Reports in Morocco Declare Three Warships To Be Assigned.

GIBRALTAR, Nov. 19.—(Tuesday)—(AP)—Reliable reports from Tangier, Morocco, declared today the United States shortly would send a cruiser and two destroyers to that Spanish-occupied port to safeguard American interests.

The report, which was not confirmed, added that the United States intended to make a naval base at Tangier.

Italian submarines still are in the Tangier harbor.

U. S. DENIES PLANNING DANGER ZONE PATROL.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Navy and State Department officials denied tonight the United States was planning to send naval vessels to the International Zone of Tangier, which commands an approach to the Gibraltar straits.

They also denied reports from Tangier that this country intends to make a naval base there.

Navy officials said the last United States warships left eastern Atlantic waters weeks ago, and a destroyer and two cruisers sailed westward to join the neutrality patrol in western hemisphere waters.

The United States made representations to Spain last week against Spain's action in assuming control of Tangier. It based its action of treaty rights acquired in 1906 which resulted from an international conference to stabilize administration in Morocco.

The United States coast guard cutter George W. Campbell went to Lisbon, Portugal, last month, as a replacement for the navy destroyer Barry and Goff and the cruiser Omaha, which were called home when the navy abolished its special European squadron.

Spain occupied the international zone of Tangier last June 14, and declared her rule there to be absolute from January 4, wiping out the international jurisdiction she had shared with Britain, Italy and France.

The United States, which has held treaty rights concerning the port and its citizens in Tangier since 1906, has shared the expense of maintaining an international light-house there, at Cape Spartel.

South Atlantic States Receive Billion in Defense Contracts

More Than $2,000,000,000 Worth Concentrated in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, Greatest Amount of Any Area.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—More than $2,000,000,000 worth of defense contracts are concentrated in the three states of New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, making defense of that thickly populated industrial area a paramount problem for the army and navy, today.

The middle Atlantic region made up of these three states has a larger amount of contracts than any other geographical area in the United States, a commission survey showed. The distribution of $7,406,509,000 of defense contracts was listed by the commission as follows:

New England—$1,322,478,000.
Middle Atlantic—$2,000,227,000.
North Central—$1,013,699,000.
South Central—$332,655,000.
South Atlantic—$1,171,197,000.
Pacific Mountain—$1,396,760,000.

Officials said that both the Army and Navy had been striving to carry out the government's announced policy of placing new defense plants in the interior, but that existing concentrations of industry had to be used to hasten production. Both services now have representatives in the field, looking over possible locations for additional plants.

The commission pointed out that its figures did not show the distribution of submarine contracts, which it represented more than 50 per cent of the expenditure in many industries. For example, the commission statement continued, a recent study showed that 536 manufacturers in 30 states contributed to the construction of a bombing plane, thus spreading defense work much more extensively than the contract figures indicate.

Welles Spikes Report of U. S. Pact With Siam

Japan Suspected of Planting Story for Expansion Reason.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The State Department described as baseless today Japanese press reports that the United States and Great Britain were pressing a military agreement upon Thailand.

The reports were given wide prominence in the Japanese press, which said they originated in Bangkok. The Tokyo foreign office spokesman said that as a result his government was "watching carefully" the situation in Thailand.

Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, declared there was not a shred of truth in the report, and added that it seemed to him there were certain implications that it might have been deliberately concocted.

This was interpreted in some quarters to mean that he suspected the reports might have been inspired by the Japanese for some reason connected with their expansionist policy.

Thailand borders French Indo-China, where Japan has acquired military bases, and also connects with the Malay Peninsula, stretching down toward British strongholds of the east—Singapore—and the Netherlands East Indies.

Washington has shown some concern over the policies of the Thailand government, which has been pressing for territorial adjustments with French Indo-China.

The United States recently requisitioned 10 military planes which had been sold to Thailand, stopping them at Manila after Thailand had advanced the territorial claims.

(There have been several recent reports, all of Japanese origin, of border clashes between Thailand and Indo-China.)

U. S. May Have To Fight, Says Legion's Chief

America Must Be Ready To Battle Outside, Warner Asserts.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Milo J. Warner, national commander of the American Legion, said today the American people "must be prepared to do our fighting outside the United States—not for the salvation of any other country—but for America."

He made this statement in an address prepared for delivery at a luncheon the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce gave for him and Legion department officers here for their annual conference at National headquarters.

He pointed out the Legion in convention had "declared that we cannot properly protect America unless we make it strong enough to meet any possible invasion before it arrives . . . so that our homes remain intact—our families secure."

He said this country should "give all practicable aid to Great Britain and to those aligned with her in her fight," adding that "this does not mean that we send troops to Europe."

"It is our duty as citizens of America to face facts as they actually are and not as we would like them to be," he declared.

"With that, at all times, goes the keen desire and determination to avoid war if possible, but in any event to preserve our own American form of government and its basic concepts."

Informed sources said, however, the withdrawals were decided upon long before the reported decision to seek peace. Japan's official explanation was that these forces no longer were needed as a result of newly-gained bases in French Indo-China.

Artillery and Scouts in Jungle Clashes, Says Tokyo Report.

TOKYO, Nov. 19.—(Tuesday)—(AP)—The newspaper Yomiuri reported today that border fighting between forces of French Indo-China and Thailand (Siam) was intensifying, with artillery and scout battling in the jungles of Laos and Cambodia.

The paper said Thailand had mobilized 100,000 men, including reserves, and that the Bangkok station was choked with troops outward bound.

(A Tokyo radio broadcast heard in New York Monday night by NBS said fighting was in progress along the Laos border and that diplomatic negotiations between Thailand and French Indo-China had failed.)

Warships, RAF Blast Italians On Wide Front

African Port, Albanian Base Pounded; London Raids Let Up.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The heavy bombardment of an Italian port in Africa and a bomb attack on an Italian base in Albania were reported by the British tonight in a series of far-ranging blows apparently intended to help their Greek and Ethiopian Allies as well as to defend the empire against the Axis.

The admiralty announced that blazing guns of light naval units took a heavy toll of Port Services at a front, Italian Somaliland. Hits were reported on oil tanks and coastal and anti-aircraft batteries and on the landing pier.

The admiralty only yesterday said light naval units had bombed Mogadiscio, principal port of Italian Somaliland, and well down the Indian ocean coast from Dante.

Almost simultaneously today, the air ministry news service announced that RAF bombers raided Elbasani, an Italian base in Albania, south of Tirana. Military supplies and dumps were hit and a fire was started, it was said.

On the channel front, British bombers, striking through a gale, pounded German batteries on the French coast while big guns on both sides of the channel sent shells screaming across the misty Strait of Dover.

The British fliers braved dirty flying weather which put a crimp in the Nazi raids on England most of the day. London had only one daylight alarm, shortly after noon and the first night alarm sounded considerably later than usual. Up until 8 o'clock, not a single German raider had appeared over the capital. Small groups were reported in the Channel, the North Sea and the northeast England.

The "raiders passed" sounded about two hours later, without the sound of gunfire or bursting bombs having been heard in London during the evening.

200 Feet of Solid Rock Shield Gibraltar Machinegun Crews

LONDON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—British military circles, weighing persistent reports that the Axis powers plan an assault through Spain on Gibraltar, declared today that the rock had been considerably strengthened since the war began.

They added that they could not see how the Axis could take this fortress which has been British since 1704.

They admitted, however, that Britain might not be able to use the peninsula as a base for its navy, but asserted that the fortress itself could hold out for at least a year without outside supplies.

Axis forces would have to make a frontal assault to have a chance of capturing Gibraltar, against machinegunners protected by about 200 feet of solid rock, these observers said.

Any idea of an attack from the sea was ruled out, they said, "as long as the British fleet is not on the bottom of the ocean."

It could not be taken from the air, for bombs would explode far above the defending forces in the honeycombed rocks; nor could it be taken by submission by far-off guns, they stated, for the rock is too solid for such attrition.

If the Axis wants Gibraltar, they will have to storm it by sending massed troops along a narrow strip of land covered by heavy British machinegun fire. It was "most unlikely" that attacking troops could get through in formidable numbers, they asserted.

These observers pointed out that at present the Axis neither had permission to use troops and guns from position in Spain, nor had Spain been brought into the war, and added it was "by no means certain" that Spain wanted to fight Britain.

The size and number of guns in Gibraltar, and the strength of the garrison, are among Britain's most closely guarded military secrets, but it is known that great quantities of weapons—particularly all types of anti-aircraft guns—have been poured into the fortress since 1938.

Women and children have been evacuated to England for safety and to lessen the drain on supplies.

Chief sources of information on accelerated defense activities on Gibraltar have been neutral military observers in Spain.

In July these circles estimated the garrison strength at 1,000 men. Since then, transports brought reinforcements of 1,600 men in July, 2,000 in October, and it was reported that they were additions to the force, rather than replacements.

The peninsula on which the rock stands is about 2 1/2 miles long and less than a mile wide. British engineers have cut a canal across the peninsula between the fortress and the Spanish mainland, calculated to halt tanks and motorized equipment should a frontal assault be attempted.

The British also have been razing buildings which impeded the gunners' view of the foreshore and land approaches. In this demolition they have been aided by French and Italian bombers—the latter having repeatedly sent long-range bombers over the fortress.

Gibraltar could be shelled from La Linea, Spain, which is only a half-mile from the rock's outer defenses on the landward side. It also is within range of the coastal guns at Algeciras, five miles across the bay, and of the heavy guns of Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, 15 miles across the strait in Africa.

Former Rumanian Premier Arrested

BUCHAREST, Nov. 18.—(UP)—General George Argeanu, twice premier and a former minister of war, has been arrested, it was confirmed tonight.

He will be sentenced after the "commission for crime" reaches a decision.

Argeanu was premier when Corneliu Codreanu, Iron Guard leader, and 12 of his followers were shot while "trying to escape."

With the fall of King Carol's regime and the rise of General Ion Antonescu as chief of the Rumanian state, the Iron Guards are in power and propose to "see justice done."

They have produced persons who swore the Iron Guard leaders were bound hand and foot when they were shot.

Italian Planes Trying To Save Trapped Army

ATHENS, Nov. 18.—(AP)—More than 30,000 Italian troops fighting a desperate defensive battle to save themselves and huge military stores in the Fascist base city of Koritza in Albania called up their airmen to cover their retreat.

A Greek government spokesman said tonight.

Italian counter-attacks against the Greek mountain troops who threatened to cut the only road of escape for the Fascist legions had ceased today, the spokesman said, and added, "We continue to crush successively the enemy lines."

More Italian prisoners and war equipment fell into Greek hands, and the Italian air onslaughts were of "no importance," the spokesman said, adding, "The Fascists losing an average of eight planes to one in the fighting, the spokesman reported."

Fighting still was very heavy, he said.

Early in the day the Greeks reported they had rolled back waves of Italian infantry attacking over the rough mountain territory surrounding Koritza, ten miles inside Albania from Greece.

In Bial, Yugoslavia, just across the border from the fighting, observers said two Italian planes in a force of 15 were shot down in a 30-minute battle with 12 Greek and British fighters near the Yugoslav border.

A big bomber which crashed under the fire of Yugoslav guns near Danilovgrad, Yugoslavia, contained half-burned documents which indicated it was British, said Belgrade dispatches. All of the crew of four were killed.

ITALY APOLOGIZES FOR YUGOSLAV RAIDS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Yugoslavia announced tonight that Italy had expressed regret for an "unintentional mistake" by Italian fliers whose bombs killed nine persons and wounded 21 in the Yugoslav border town of Bitolj on November 5.

A Yugoslav communique said Italy agreed in principle to Yugoslavia's request for damages.

Mussolini said the Greeks, mysteriously hating Italy and other people, conspired with the British to humble Italy and make Britain the absolute Mediterranean power that Carthage was.

Mussolini avoided any hint of the course of future Axis action, but he stressed that Italy's collaboration with Germany was "really comradesly and totalitarian," and that "we are marching side by side" and thinking alike.

Best Way to Meet an Attack of Cries

By Dr. William Brady.

Without a "cold cure" or a sure means of "breaking it up," we can one best meet the attack of cries? What do I mean "cries?" Cry of the common respiratory infections in the stage of onset before you can tell what the illness is going to be. You can be reasonably certain it is cry (kree), at is, a common respiratory infection, and by calling it that name you are at least playing fair with your friends or associates and with yourself, for you are not peddling without warning pestilence—maybe disaster-indiscriminate—among those unfortunate enough to be within your conversational range, nor on the other hand, or you trifling with what, for all you know, may prove to be meningitis, pneumonia, infantile paralysis, measles, flu or whatnot. That's what I mean by cry.

Adults coming down with cry could be extremely reluctant and children should never be permitted to take a nostrum that purports to be good for "colds," grip and other troubles. Nearly all such nostrums contain and depend on their chief effect upon a common derivative such as acetanilide, phenacetin, antipyrin, aminopyrin, aspirin (acetyl-salicylic acid, or some similar pain-killer, nerve or sense deadener or temperature reducer. These coal-tar analgesics dull one's sense or consciousness of ache, pain, malaise, fatigue or anxiety or weakness only at the expense of the natural means of self-defense. For one thing, they interfere with the oxygen-carrying function of the hemoglobin (coloring matter in the blood) and so impose upon whatever illness may be present the additional danger of anoxia, insufficient supply of oxygen to the vital functional cells and organs.

If I were in any great pain or distress and could not reach a physician, I might take a dose of five or 10 grains of acetyl-salicylic acid (any aspirin, which ever my druggist might sell at lowest price), and if that failed to bring a fair measure of relief, I might even chance a second dose an hour or two later, but not any more. I'd prefer the ordinary discomfort of mild headache, malaise or indisposition or a tolerable pain in the neck to the hazard of damage to blood or heart by pain-killer drug. In any circumstance I should NOT indulge in the analgesic unless I could lie down and rest at least two hours immediately. To my mind the poor geek who takes such dope and keeps up and about courts disaster.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Vitamin B Content of Foods.

Have you a pamphlet giving the amount of vitamin B complex in different foods? (Mrs. E. L.)

Answer—No. But you can purchase for five cents such a pamphlet from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.—Technical Bulletin 707, Department of Health, "Vitamin B, Content of Foods."

Meat.

My doctor, a specialist, says meat once a day is enough for even a working man. I know many strong persons, one a masseuse, who never touch it. Have heard Hitler is a vegetarian, eats soy beans. (A. W. C.)

Answer—Meat once a day is enough for any one. However, if you wish, it is all right to eat meat two or three times a day. Eating meat or not eating it has nothing to do with a person's strength.

Today's Charm Tip

Don't say "between you and I." It should be "between you and me." Don't say he bought tickets for "her and I." He bought tickets for "her and me" is correct.

Go peasant for comfort, says lovely Renee Haal, who delights in the easy informality of this peasant-styled costume. High-necked yoke and cuffs of full-sleeved, white batiste blouse are of delicate lace. Pink roses "grow" on the full-cut skirt of green that's topped with a basque of black velvet and defined at the hem with three rows of the narrow black velvet. The Healthy Eat Sensibly And Forget Diet Fads

By Ida Jean Kain.

Try to imagine a luncheon at which each guest was invited to "bring your own diet!" You'd be so busy looking at the assortment of fads and listening to the posterous promises made for them that you wouldn't have time to eat!

Dr. Helen S. Mitchell, research professor of nutrition at Massachusetts State College, who presented this humorous imaginary situation at a public meeting of the recent convention of the American Dietetic Association, went on to list the food faddists you would be likely to meet.

There would be at least one person with a raw fruit and vegetable diet, someone else with a special lunch of vegetable juices and some kind of crackers, an advocate of the pineapple and lamb chop diet, and perhaps someone with a hungry look but nothing in her bag because she is restricting herself to only two meals a day. And, of course one of the guests would have a diet in which the foods were chosen to harmonize with protein!

The diets to be avoided, Dr. Mitchell stressed, are the ones which were never originated by reputable doctors or dietitians. Although none of the foods included in the list mentioned are harmful, most faddy diets are incomplete in one or more respects. "The addicts would survive without a doubt," she says. But the question is, why do it? "Cooking adds variety in flavor and texture makes many foods edible which could not be used raw," Dr. Mitchell adds. "Some raw fruits and vegetables in the daily menu are an excellent source of vitamin C, which is easily destroyed by cooking, but that does not mean we should eat all our food raw! Some digestive tracts would be unable to cope with a large amount of raw cellulose."

If you have the price, Dr. Mitchell states that the "natural foods," such as sea salt, raw sugar, olive oil instead of fat and lemon juice instead of vinegar are perfectly harmless—but also unnecessary! There is nothing harmful or poisonous in the foods for which they are substituted.

Another objection well taken is the one that certain vegetable juices are accredited with virtues which surpass the natural sources. You may have heard it said that celery juice will cure indigestion, that carrot juice does marvels for the complexion, that parsley juice is a building tonic, that garlic fixes up high blood pressure, or that cabbage juice flushes the kidneys and lemon juice will straighten out gall bladder. Well, don't put your faith in any such promises.

As for the compatible eating system, Dr. Mitchell declares that "we eat combinations whether we will or no—even these diet faddists cannot avoid it, but they neglect to tell their patients about that point."

Most promoters of these diet systems or health institutes have poise, personality and persuasion, Dr. Mitchell serves. They speak convincingly, mixing a smattering of scientific knowledge with the false or misleading to suit their needs. As for the systems themselves—"extravagant claims for cure or relief of various complaints are always to be doubted," she asserts. In purchasing dietary supplements, scrutinize the labels to make sure that the number of Sherman or International units of the vitamins is given along with the number of milligrams per tablet. There is plenty of sound advice available as to the amount you should take.

In conclusion, bear in mind this parting word from Dr. Mitchell: "Money spent for better food—for more of the protective foods—will go further to promote better health for America than the same amount of money now being spent for health and diet fads."

Paulette Lost Co-Starring Status in Charlie Chaplin's 'The Great Dictator'

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 18—George Brent is definitely not going to marry Ann Sheridan. I have this straight from Brent himself. "Why should I get married?" George asked me. "I'm very happy the way I am now." So that should settle that. . . . Gary Cooper will bring Ernest Hemingway back with him to Hollywood, where the author works on the script of "For Whom the Bell Tolls." . . . Paulette Goddard's recent cavortings cost her a co-starring status with Chaplin in "The Great Dictator." When I saw Paulette prior to the release of the picture, she could hardly speak for joy at the prospect of sharing the top billing with Charlie. But if you look at the credit sheet of the film, the actor's name shines forth in solitary splendor.

Olivia de Havilland acts as interference for Jimmy Stewart on their dates together. It's cute to see her forging ahead through the crowd, holding Jimmy's hand, like a mother forcing a recalcitrant child. . . . Myrna Loy is paying $35 a day for a big room at the Cedars of Lebanon hospital. She has three nurses in attendance on eight-hour shifts. What's the matter with her? Oh, she has a cold. . . . Carole Lombard gets $1,000 a week when loaned to another studio, but at home for Hal Roach's No wonder she likes to leave the home lot. The ex-ping girl is now No. 1 as far as Franchot Tone is concerned.

Ann Sothern discusses the old days when she was called Harriet Lake. "I was 20 pounds heavier then and could eat anything I liked," sighs Ann. . . . Mrs. William Powell has the best figure on the Metro lot, according to the boys who take photographs. She has just posed for another dozen stills in bathing suits, so I reckon Bill has removed his veto on this grab for Diana. However, he did put his foot down on having the photographs in color. Patriotic Parties Are Fun

The latest—a patriotic party! Have red, white and blue decorations, lively games with a patriotic theme—and your crowd vows you're the cleverest hostess in town.

Playing a "famous American" version of "Who Am I?" breaks the ice and gets your party off to a rollicking start. Pin to the back of each guest a card bearing a well-known name, but—watch out—the mustn't peek!

Up to everyone to guess his own identity by asking questions. Betsy Ross, asking what she's noted for, is mystified when Patrick Henry tells her "Needlework!" As for poor, distracted Admiral Dewey, his questions about his fame have every music playing. "I joined the navy to see the world. What did I see? I saw the sea!"

Soon, in the mix-up, everybody knows everybody else and the crowd's hilariously ready for a "Patriotic Balloon Dance." With a music playing, "I joined the navy to see the world," each of blue balloons tied to the ankles of each dancer, there's sure to be excitement—especially if you tell the gang you'll give prizes to any who have their balloons intact when the music's over.

The "Paul Revere's Ride" Strew the floor with obstacles like a glass of water, a hat, an egg. Tell the guest who's Paul Revere that you'll let him practice his perilous journey through these objects once. Then blindfold him, swirl him around and send him on his way—but meanwhile you've quietly removed the hazards! Hilarity as Paul steps along high, wide and handsome.

All your parties are a success when you know clever tricks. Have you ever played "Fortune's Whim?"

"You'll find 'Fortune's Whim' and many other lively stunts, fortunes and games in our 40-page PARTIES. Has Jolly Ice-breakers, team games, brain-teasers, tricks to keep the fun at fever pitch all evening.

Granville perched on Frank Morgan's lap, with Frank fast asleep!

They think that Barbara Stanwyck is acting high-hat at Paramount. She is not. She is playing a high-hat character in her movie, "Lady Eve," and is merely concentrating on her role. As I have stated before, Barbara is one of the hardest people in Hollywood to understand, but once she knows you and trusts you, all bars are down. . . . That reminds me, Robert Taylor is selling his unwanted property in the valley to a bunch of flying filmies who want a landing field and an aero club. Bob is the latest actor with the flying bug. . . . Hollywood's 3,000 cowboys are currently getting a riding test! They have to be winnowed down to 1,500, and those who fall by the wayside—mean horse—will be struck off the list.

Sylvia Sidney was at the opera in a red hat, red dress, smoking a cigarette in a long holder, and wearing tortoise-shell-rimmed eyeglasses. She was unrecognized by the mob outside the theater. It must have seemed strange to Sylvia to find herself so utterly ignored. . . . Everyone on the Warner lot is amazed at the change in Errol Flynn. Gone is that swashbuckling recklessness. He is now positively subdued. I think he has discovered that there are a lot of people in the world—in addition to Mr. Flynn. I like him this way.

When they say in Hollywood, "Look, here come the 'Dead End' kids," they refer to Mischa Auer, Broderick Crawford and Franchot Tone, who have taken up where their predecessors left off.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Mother: "Mary, you've grown so fast, you need a new coat." Jean: "Can't I have one, too?" Mother: "No, dear. Your coat is still good and we cannot afford to buy what we do not need."

Mary: "Mother, can't I have a new coat? See how short these sleeves are." Mother: "You'll have to wait awhile until we can afford to buy two coats. It wouldn't be fair to buy you a coat and not get Jean one."

Children will accept discrimination if it is obviously fair.

A Cripple Offers Suggestions That May Help Another

By Caroline Chatfield.

"Kind hearts are more than coronets," wrote Mr. Tennyson. And aren't we glad that kind hearts didn't go out with coronets? In days when stories of death and disaster are as regular as morning coffee, when the face of the earth is shadowed with dark tragedy, it's heartening to discover that the simple story of a crippled girl brings quick response from readers of her tale, people who write to express sympathy and offer practical suggestions as to how her handicap may be overcome, giving practical suggestions too as to how she may live a normal life in spite of crippled legs.

From among a number of such letters we print one in full, choosing this one because it covers the case from several angles:

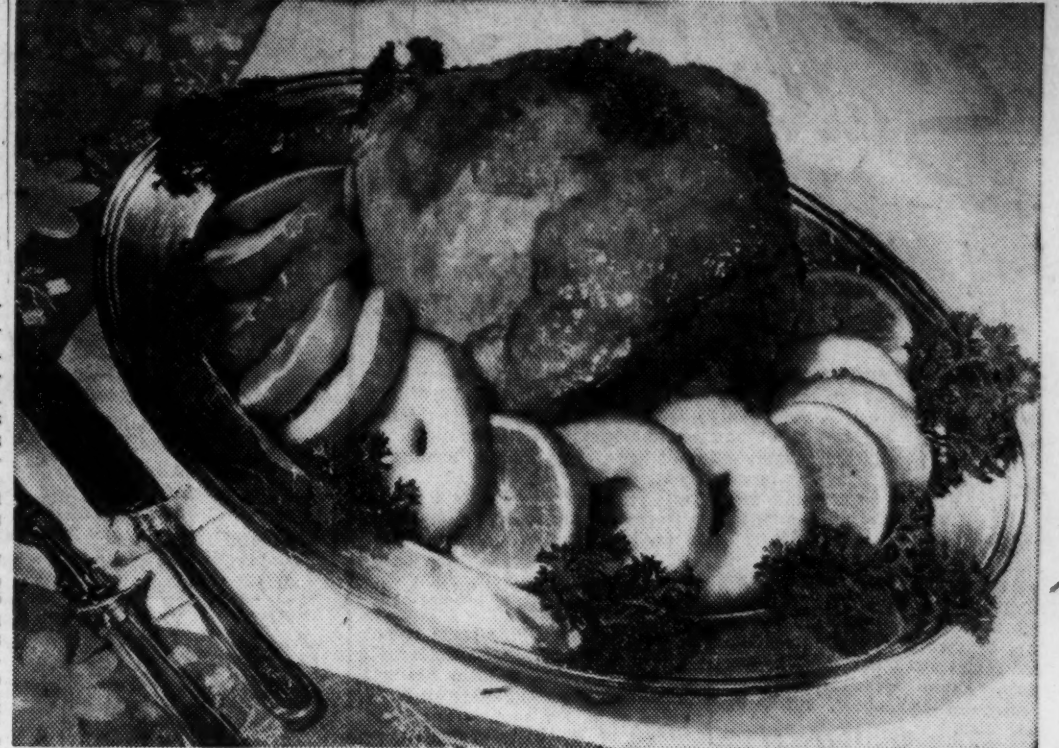

"I read in your column of October 7, in which the crippled girl, Lillian, bemoaned her fate. I am not a Pollyanna by any means, but I wish to relate my story. At the age of seven I was in an accident and, unfortunately, lost my left leg, which was amputated above the knee. During my childhood, I tried to get along as well as I could on crutches—managed, too. I graduated from grammar school and completed a commercial course at a local high school. I entered the business world when I was about 18 years of age and held stenographic and secretarial positions. My handicap did not seem to alter the fact that I could perform my duties, and do them well.

"Of course, there were times when I felt I had been defrauded, because I could not do a great many things that a normal person could. However, in my childhood I went sleigh riding; also roller skated outdoors, played basketball and did other innumerable feats that a normal child could do. At times I was very moody and depressed. I felt that life was not worth while—but not for too long a period. Somehow or other, I would overcome this feeling. I was very sociable and made numerous friends from contacts during business hours, etc. Socially, I wasn't much of a success. I had sort of an inferiority complex because of my condition. I did not like to enter any place where crowds were congregated. I disliked having people stare at me and feel sorry for me. I did not want sympathy. I thought, too, as 'Lillian' did, that life held no future for me; that it would be my lot to work the rest of my natural life. I did not brood over this too much. I felt there were others who were less fortunate than I.

"I can attribute my cheerful outlook on life to the fact that during my childhood my parents, who were in mediocre circumstances, trained me to do various chores around the house; expected me to be self-reliant, and never thought of me as anything but normal. If there was an errand to be done and I was around, I would be called upon to do it. My handicap did not stop me from marrying. I am happily married to the finest (normal) man in the world. We have an apartment of our own and we love it. He is very helpful and tries to save me as many unnecessary steps as he can. It is unfortunate that 'Lillian' had to meet with an accident which occurred when she was grown up. She hasn't 'grown up' with her misfortune. She will have to adjust herself to new conditions. Naturally, this is hard. She must make up her mind that she must readjust and rehabilitate herself. One must have will power. It can be done.

"Dances aren't everything. There are so many other things one can enjoy—good reading, making, crocheting, knitting, lectures, concerts, friends, etc. If 'Lillian' will stop bemoaning her fate, she will find that there are any number of people who are worse off than she is. She has a position and supports her mother. She should be thankful for that, as there are so many able-bodied people who are unemployed."

Roast pork with apple and orange rings is fine for holiday meals.

Many Choose Pork For Holiday Fare

By Sally Saver.

There'll be a great demand for food hearty yet festive this week. With Thanksgiving visitors, family at home and hungry football spectators on hand, there will be plenty of meals to plan. Of course, there will be meals built about turkey, duck or roast chicken. Some meal planners will choose roast pork for holiday fare. A fresh pork ham roasted to a savory turn, the outer coating of fat crisply brown, appeals strongly to southern appetites and its flavor is enhanced by a fruit accompaniment.

Proceed in this way for a delicious roast of pork: Bake a fresh ham slowly by placing fat side up in an open roasting pan in a slow oven, 300 degrees. Allow 30 to 40 minutes a pound for cooking. Do not cover the pan and do not add any water. During the last hour of cooking remove skin, if any, from ham and baste with 1 cup of brown sugar dissolved in 1-2 cup of apple juice. Baste meat frequently to obtain a nice glaze. Serve with apple and orange rings.

1 cup granulated sugar
Apple rings
Orange rings
Combine sugar and water and boil for a few minutes. Wash and core apples. Cut crosswise in 1-2 or 3-4 inch slices, unpeeled. Cook in syrups until transparent. Remove to a broiler platter and sprinkle with powdered or granulated sugar. The orange rings may be left uncooked or prepared in exactly the same manner as the apple rings.

MY DAY: Building Friendship In South America

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

CANTON, Ohio, Sunday.—Our drive to Princeton, Ill., on Friday night was uneventful until we reached the city itself. There we wandered down a few streets and came to dead ends before we actually found the remarkably fine high school building of which the city is justly proud.

Princeton is in the heart of a very productive agricultural area and depends largely for its prosperity on agricultural conditions. There are mines in this vicinity, but they have been closed down, apparently long enough for the labor to be absorbed in other occupations and not to be a real problem at present.

I inquired as to whether their young people were finding it hard to obtain jobs and was told that one big industry absorbed most of them. However, they have made use of NYA help in their schools, but on the whole they reported a remarkably fortunate condition for their neighborhood. Since I had the whole day free in Chicago yesterday, I was able to see several people who had written me.

First of all, Dr. Ernest Schwartz, of the Central Y. M. C. A. College, came to tell me of the work they are doing to promote the good-neighbor policy through contacts with people in some of the countries to the south of us. They are particularly interested in the schools, both urban and rural, to which they send books and pictures. They establish forums and encourage the interchange of scholarships on a college level.

After lunch I went to look at some of the work which will be shown at the WPA Art Week exhibits in Chicago. They have some wonderful materials. Most striking were the names of the various artists and craftsmen, for they denoted a variety of nationalities and proved that in this great city of Chicago we are indeed a union of many people.

MISS OLIVE BELL DAVIS.

Miss Olive Bell Davis Bows To Society at Home Reception

A large bouquet of orchids showered with tiny roses and lilies of the valley were carried by Miss Olive Bell Davis yesterday afternoon when she made her formal bow to fashionable members of society at an elaborate reception given by her mother, Mrs. Charles M. Davis. The exquisite designs being interspersed with elegant embroidery.

In the center of the table was a handsome silver vase filled with pastel flowers, including sunset roses, pink and white carnations, a nemesia lavender chrysanthemum, pink and yellow snapdragons and blue delphinium, with dainty sprays of asparagus ferns sprouting to form the colorful and fresh outline of the arrangement. Flanking either side of the centerpiece were silver candleabra tapered with small bunches of pastel flowers. On the buffet were silver urns filled with flowers of harmonizing shades.

Mrs. Miller S. Bell and Mrs. Birna Davis, grandmothers of the debutante, assisted in entertaining and Mrs. Frank Bone and Mrs. McComb Hines, both of Milledgeville, also assisted.

Among special guests attending the affair were a trio of popular belles who were former classmates of the honor guest. They were Miss Nadia Barnett, of Jacksonville; Margaret Jamerson, of Charleston, W. Va., both of whom were her roommates at the University of Georgia.

Mrs. Davis, who is slender and graceful and possessing the brunet type of beauty, presented a picture of patrician loveliness in her model of ice-blue satin fashioned with a light bodice and a long full skirt. The lines of the gown were designed especially for the young belle and further offset her beauty. Her flowers, given her by her grandparents, blended in colorful harmony with her gown.

Mrs. Davis, the hostess, was a handsome figure in her model of winter honey chiffon fashioned with sequin bodice of the same fashionable new shade. Completing her ensemble was a cluster of deep purple orchids worn on her left shoulder.

Dainty Dresden shades predominated in the flowers, which were beautifully arranged throughout the lower floor of the home, where the guests assembled. In the dining room the table was covered with an imported Italian hand-made cloth, the exquisite madalid designs being interspersed with elegant embroidery.

ehre Fears Early Scoring Hurts Chance

els Have Tendency
o Grap Lead, Then
Take It Easy.

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Nov. 18.—Football coaches always can something to worry about, the Mississippi bosses are urged over the fear their boys at take too much a lead over Mississippi State's Maroons in a traditional clash at Stark-Saturday.

The Rebels have a tendency to relax too much when they get a few points to the good habit, manifested in nearly every game this season, has been for their only loss and for not getting them licked another time.

Coach Harry Mehre declared Les Dodson's 90-yard kick-return which gave the Rebs a 7 lead over Arkansas brought out Ole Miss' defeat. The boys let down and allowed the Rebs to win the ball game with a sudden thrust, 21-20.

Ole Miss took a 21-0 lead over Georgia with Junior Hovious' indelible one-man show. Then, in the game apparently on ice, Rebs suddenly found themselves pushed all over the place as Bulldogs attacked in the final end and made it 21-14. Merle Pees had to intercept a pass and a 70 yards for another touchdown to salt the game away.

On the other hand, the Rebs stay in there and fight when going is toughest. They came behind to beat Louisiana State and Vanderbilt, and in the latter game had to overcome the handicap of soft ground which impeded their fast-breaking offense.

The Rebels' weakness for taking easy has also shown itself in new hat rascled play against weak opponents. This drew from assistant Coach Chuck Jaskwich the comment, "I wouldn't fear we'd beat Minnesota or Cornell, but I could promise a slava ball game. At the same time I'd feel just as worried over game with Millaps or Mississippi College."

To quote Tenneyson (or was it wordsworth?):

Oh, the Rebels blow hot
And the Rebels blow cold.
When the game's in the bag
They are likely to fold.

Tulane Traditions Fall on Bulldogs

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 18.—(P) Couple of Tulane traditions—the two-team system and reliance on round power alone—apparently have gone by the board.

Coach Lowell "Red" Dawson surprised his players in the dressing room before the Georgia game Saturday with the curt announcement that "the two-team system is out." He sent in reserves as they were needed, one, two or three at a time, but kept his steadier performers in there nearly the whole game.

Tulane opened up with passes and Coach Wallace Butts, of Georgia, blamed them for a major part in his team's 21-13 defeat.

"Just when we were about convinced Tulane wouldn't do anything but run our line," he said, "they opened up with some good passes and had us."

All in the Game

BY JACK TROY

No 'In Between' Any time Auburn wins a game of football it's a major victory—and any time Auburn loses a game of football it's a major defeat.

There's no in between where the Tigers of the Plains are concerned. The schedule annually calls for no rest games and for all except one game away from home.

Boston College is the opponent this Saturday at Boston. The B. C. behemoths, unbeaten and untied, and with a tentative Sugar Bowl bid at hand.

Boston College, coached by Frank Leahy, formerly line coach at Fordham, is one of the great powers. And also one of the largest teams in America.

Second-string Chet Gladchuck, who backs up the line, is a mere six foot six and weighs 240 pounds. John Youckoes, regular tackle, is just as tall as Gladchuck, but he weighs closer to 260 than to 250.

These magnificent men can move around. No one knows that any better than Tulane or Georgetown.

So there is no let-up for the plucky Plainsmen from the Lovell Village.

It used to be their battle-cry was "War Eagle!" Still is, in fact.

Now they're going to war with the Boston Eagles. They won't be given a chance in the advance rating, having suffered an unexpected defeat at the hands of oft-beaten L. S. U.

Maybe it will be a mistake not to rate Auburn well, however. The Plainsmen have been injured and have a chance of being at full strength for B. C. They could make a surprising showing.

At any rate, it's the big hurdle for Boston College. If Auburn is overcome, only oft-beaten Holy Cross will remain on the schedule.

And unless Auburn upsets the dope, it'll be Boston College and Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans. You may be sure of that.

Great Gesture Cornell's mighty Red Raiders—from high above Cayuga's waters—made a magnificent gesture yesterday—a precedent-setting gesture.

Pictures plainly showed they scored on fifth down against Dartmouth—in the last second of play.

And so Cornell graciously set aside precedent. Instead of apologizing, Cornell offered the game to Dartmouth, 3 to 0.

Dartmouth accepted.

And why shouldn't Dartmouth accept? Dartmouth really won the game by a field goal, and it is only right that the Big Green should have access to a staggering upset. Things haven't been going so well this season, anyway.

Cornell now makes Ohio State look like a bum sport. Ohio State merely apologized for illegally substituting Tackle Maag and thus tying Purdue on a field goal.

Ohio State stays in the books as a 17-14 winner over Purdue.

So it has now come to the point where a football game has been decided by pictures. But only because a school was big enough to make the offer.

Nothing could have been done about Cornell scoring on a fifth down if the Red Raider officials—and Coach Carl Snively—had willed otherwise.

It would have been the easier course to apologize.

Remember how Coach Schmidt, of Ohio State, raved about Coach Snively's alleged coaching from the bench?

In the eyes of fandom Snively is a hero now—and Schmidt is a bum. Snively gave a football game away—two days after the final whistle had blown.

All Schmidt did was apologize to Purdue, and kept the victory.

Results Does it pay to advertise? Ask Horace Hixon, assistant state treasurer. Here is Mr. Hixon's letter:

"Dear Jack:
"You were kind enough to mention in your column on last Wednesday the fact that I had six tickets to the Army-Navy football game to be played in Philadelphia on November 24."

All Tech Boys Will Be Ready For Floridans

Wright, Cavette Only
Ailing Members; Coach
Respects 'Gators.

Cheered at their great game against Alabama last week and in good physical condition, Georgia Tech's rebounding Yellow Jackets took a short light drill in preparation for their game with Florida Saturday at Grant Field.

With Jim Wright and Captain Hawk Cavette the sole casualties from the Alabama game, the Jackets, realizing there can be no clothes, realizing their can be no let down against the tough 'Gator eleven, which has suddenly blossomed into a unified grid power.

Wright suffered a pulled leg muscle against the Tide and Cavette was in the hospital with an attack of the flu, which, incidentally, he had while playing a great game Saturday.

Both are expected to be ready for the Gators. Cavette probably will leave the hospital this morning and Wright should be ready, although it is unlikely he will take part in any rough work before the game.

Norris Dean and George Moyer scouted the 'Gators in their game with Miami last weekend and reported Tom Lieb's boys will be plenty tough to handle. They had little trouble with Miami and have come a long way since the first of the season under a new coach.

Both scouts warned the Jackets against a letdown. It would be very easy for the Jackets to take it easy after playing so well against the Tide and with Georgia coming up the following weekend.

Florida has a big, rugged line which stacks up with the best of them. Her defense in her last three ball games has been superb.

Grant Is Rated
No. 1 Southern Tennis Player

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 18.—(P)—Bryan M. (Bitty) Grant, of Atlanta, southern tennis champion and former Davis Cup star, was ranked No. 1 in the 1940 rankings released today by the Southern Lawn Tennis Association.

Arlene Henderson, of Chapel Hill, N. C., runner-up to Grant in the southern, was ranked No. 2, displacing Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, who held that spot in 1939.

Mulloy and his fellow townsman, Billy Gillespie, rated No. 3 and No. 4 in that order, and with Grant and Henderson formed the semi-finals bracket in the southern.

Behind Grant, Henderson, Mulloy and Gillespie in the men's division were ranked in order Dick McKee, Miami; Harris Everett, Jacksonville; Russell Bobbit, Atlanta; Earl Bartlett, New Orleans; Bill Hardie, Miami; John Hayden, Nashville; Louis Faquin, Memphis; Alex Guerry, Chattanooga; George Parks, Miami; Don Bufington, Atlanta; Billy Farmer, Tampa; John Ager, Birmingham; George Pero, Miami; Louis Schopfer, New Orleans, No. 18.

Morris Brown,
Clark To Meet
For Grid Title

The traditional Thursday afternoon clash between Morris Brown and Clark will decide the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference championship and the municipal title.

This is one of the rare occasions in the history of the conference that two local teams meet to decide the coveted honor. Not since 1928 has the issue been decided in Atlanta and that game was between Atlanta University, then an undergraduate institution, and Clark University. Atlanta University won that year, which shows that Clark will make another bid that holds just as much interest here as the '28 clash.

Both the principals of Thursday's unusual attraction won last Saturday by handsome margins. Clark overwhelmed a Talladega team by the one-sided count of 38-0. Morris Brown in Knoxville defeated the Knoxville College Bulldogs by the heavy score of 46-0.

Heyward Allen Played Last 3
Games With a Broken Thumb

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 18.—Little Heyward Allen, Georgia's junior passing star, has played in three ball games with a cracked thumb on his throwing hand, it was revealed today by X-ray pictures.

Allen hurt his thumb in the Kentucky game, but did not think it serious enough to have a picture made. He reinjured it Saturday, reported it to Trainer Fitz Lutz today, and the digit was found to be fractured between the fingernail and first knuckle.

It will be placed in splints tomorrow morning and the little Birmingham bomber will be in top shape for the game with Georgia Tech here two weeks away.

Coach Wallace Butts gave the entire squad an off-day Monday, but will resume practice sessions Tuesday afternoon. There will be at least one, maybe two, scrimmages on tap this week as the Bulldogs go about getting ready for the Yellow Jackets. Georgia doesn't play this week.

Other than a few bruises here and there, the Red and Black gridders came out of Saturday's fracas with Tulane's powerful Green Wave in good shape. Gene Ellenson, sophomore tackle, slightly injured his shoulder but it won't hamper him in work this week.

FOOTBALL BALLET—This cute little number was the result of one of Sid Luckman's tosses for the Chicago Bears in Sunday's game. Bob Swisher (48), Bear halfback, is trying for the catch, while Jarrin' Jim Meade (49), of the Redskins, successfully does his best to bat it down. The Redskins won, 7 to 3.

Wilson Given Two-Year Contract To Pilot Cubs

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—(P)—Jimmy Wilson, of Philadelphia, 40-year-old hero of the 1940 World Series, agreed today to sign a two-year contract as manager of the Chicago Cubs.

The veteran catcher-coach of the world's championship Cincinnati Reds replaces Charles Leo (Gabby) Hartnett, who was ousted last Wednesday.

Signing of the contract, a mere formality, will be delayed until possibly tomorrow pending the arrival of Wilson's unconditional release from Cincinnati. Warren Giles, general manager of the Reds, has consented to give Wilson his release and to bring the papers to Chicago, after which the new Cub boss will be free to sign his name on the dotted line.

His salary, reported to be about $20,000 annually—was not revealed, but Wilson characterized his pay as "reasonable." He insisted on a two-year contract, according to James T. Gallagher, general manager of the club—a departure from the custom followed by Owner Philip K. Wrigley in giving one-year contracts.

Wilson said definitely that he would not be a player-manager. "I am through as a player," Wilson said with a laugh. "I knew I was through catching two years ago, but the emergency existed at Cincinnati and I simply had to go in. I'm tired sitting up until 3 a. m. in a Turkish bath trying to get the aches and pains out of my system so I could play the next day."

Wilson revealed that one of his coaches would be Dick Spalding, former outfielder and coach of the Philadelphia Phillies during three of Wilson's five years as manager of that club. Spalding also is a Philadelphian.

"He's the only coach I've decided upon," Wilson said. "He will be my 'close' man, doing a lot of the work and developing players. I'll coach at third base and the other coach, as yet unnamed, will be at first."

Vols Relinquish Third Position To Minnesota

Boston, Georgetown Replace
Duke, Northwestern
in 'Big 10.'

By PAUL B. WILLIAMSON.

Texas A. & M.'s 25-0 victory over Rice and the second best line in the Southwestern Conference leaves the Aggies in the No. 1 position. Stanford, with a clean 28-14 victory over Oregon State, repeated at the No. 2 post. Minnesota's powerful 33-6 drive over Purdue edged Tennessee out for the No. 3 ranking. Tennessee, while dropping an improved Virginia, 41 to 14, met a team of less calibre than Purdue.

Michigan, S. M. U., Nebraska and Cornell remained among the first 10, along with two newcomers, Boston College and Georgetown University. Duke and Northwestern, however, dropped out.

Cornell's position depends, however, on the final decision of the judges whether the Big Red beat Dartmouth 7-3, or whether Dartmouth beat Cornell 3-0. Cornell's winning touchdown, many believed, came from a fifth down.

This week, we give only the Williamson system's 98 leading teams of the nation, so that the Thanksgiving day predictions can be gotten out in time.

The victories of the first eight leaders were picked correctly by the system. Other good predictions included California over Oregon, Hardin-Simmons over Catholic U.—a honey!—Denver over Utah State, George Washington over Kansas, Alabama over Georgia Tech, Ohio State over Illinois, Penn State over New York U., Nebraska over Pitt, Princeton over Yale, Texas over T. C. U., Texas Tech over Wake Forest—another honey!—Tulane over Georgia, Utah over Colorado State, Drake over Washington of St. Louis, Marshall over Xavier of

Ex-Baseball Star
Passes Away at 81

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 18.—(P)—John (Pa) Harkins, 81, one of the last surviving big-time baseball players of the '80s, died at his home today after an illness of several months.

Harkins pitched for Cleveland, Brooklyn and Baltimore from 1884 to 1888 and was the hurling half of the famous Cleveland battery, Harkins-Bushong, which thrilled fans back in 1884.

Archer Reports
Wild Boar Kill

TELLICO PLAINS, Tenn., Nov. 18.—(P)—The first kill of a wild boar by an archer during the current hunting season was registered today in the Cherokee National forest near here.

The archer was T. H. McNish, lumber broker of Madison, near Nashville. He used two arrows to bring down the 20-pound tusker.

Heyward Allen Played Last 3
Games With a Broken Thumb

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 18.—Little Heyward Allen, Georgia's junior passing star, has played in three ball games with a cracked thumb on his throwing hand, it was revealed today by X-ray pictures.

Allen hurt his thumb in the Kentucky game, but did not think it serious enough to have a picture made. He reinjured it Saturday, reported it to Trainer Fitz Lutz today, and the digit was found to be fractured between the fingernail and first knuckle.

It will be placed in splints tomorrow morning and the little Birmingham bomber will be in top shape for the game with Georgia Tech here two weeks away.

Coach Wallace Butts gave the entire squad an off-day Monday, but will resume practice sessions Tuesday afternoon. There will be at least one, maybe two, scrimmages on tap this week as the Bulldogs go about getting ready for the Yellow Jackets. Georgia doesn't play this week.

Other than a few bruises here and there, the Red and Black gridders came out of Saturday's fracas with Tulane's powerful Green Wave in good shape. Gene Ellenson, sophomore tackle, slightly injured his shoulder but it won't hamper him in work this week.

Cornell-Penn Battle at Philadelphia Tops Week's Grid Struggle

Dartmouth Celebrates 'Motion Picture' Victory

2,000 Students Snake-Dance Through Town; Referee Apologizes for Error.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 18.—(AP)—The Dartmouth undergraduate celebration of its football success against Cornell, which tapered down a bit as the boys followed classroom schedules, broke out with renewed enthusiasm tonight when it became known that their gallant Indians had been conceded the 3-0 victory they claimed for them as duly won on Saturday.

Rallying behind their green-jerseyed bandmen, more than 2,000 hilarious undergraduates again whooped and snake-danced through the streets of this college town, and after disrupting traffic and business, gave their heroes another ear-splitting ovation.

Dartmouth Football Captain Lou Young made public a telegram he received from Referee W. H. Friesell, which read:

"I want to be the first to admit my very grave error on the extra down as proven by the motion pictures of both colleges. I want to apologize to you, your players, Coach Blaik, all assistant coaches and Mr. McCarter (Dartmouth Athletic Director William H. McCarter). I assume full responsibility. I want to thank you for all the fair treatment after the game. Lou, I am so sorry, for you were such a grand captain and leader."

"Mr. Friesell was probably just as excited as all the rest of us were at the time," Young explained. "He is still the best referee in the business."

Football practice, intended to be a light one, was cut short when the students demanded that the players again appear before them. Before they arrived, Coach Earl Blaik had started his Brown-game preparations by having his players limber up by playing touch football.

Pro Grid Outfits To Play Off Ties

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(UP)—An innovation in football—the "sudden death" system—will be used by the National Professional Football league to decide tie games that occur in possible playoffs between teams which may be deadlocked for leadership of each division when the regular 1940 season closes.

Under the system—borrowed from professional hockey which uses it in championship play-offs—the team scoring first after the regulation playing time is declared the winner. President Carl Storch said that if the teams are tied at the end of the regulation game, they will toss a coin just as at the start of the game. If neither team has scored in the first "sudden death" period, there will be a two-minute intermission and the game will continue until one has scored.

'CORNELL WON.'

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Although Cornell and Dartmouth have agreed that Dartmouth won their football game Saturday, 3-0, the bookmakers still are calling it Cornell's game.

Ram-Arkansas Contest Heads Thursday Slate

Auburn-Boston, Ole Miss-Maroon Games Bear on 'Bowls.'

By JACK CUDDY.
NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(UP)—Four of the nation's surviving six perfect-record football teams see action on this Thanksgiving week's double-barreled program, with the Tennessee-Kentucky and Boston College-Auburn games commanding most attention.

Of the six unbeaten and untied outfits, Stanford and the Texas Aggies will be idle. Minnesota, Tennessee and Boston College face stiff opposition, but Lafayette seems to have an easy opponent in Lehigh.

Meanwhile, titles will be decided in the Southern and Big Seven conferences.

Cornell was shunted out of the perfect-record ranks today when Cornell officials voluntarily accepted a 3-0 defeat by Dartmouth. This change was made when Referee Red Friesell admitted his error in permitting Cornell a fifth down, on which the winning touchdown was made. This change saps some of the lustre connected with Cornell's game this Saturday with Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, since it removes the perfect-record risk.

In the two banner games, Tennessee and Boston College will be making valiant bids for invitations to bowl games against the most formidable hurdles remaining on their schedules. Tennessee, after two "breather" opponents, is tackling strong Kentucky, which will be trying to bounce back after last week's upset by West Virginia. Boston College is meeting dangerous Auburn, conqueror of Tulane, Georgia Tech and Clemson. Auburn, too, will be trying a comeback after last week's upset by Louisiana State.

Minnesota, which clinched the Big Ten title by beating Purdue last week, engages improved Wisconsin. In Spalding's official football guide, Stanford was listed as playing California Saturday, but this game will not be held until November 30.

The rest of competition may be sectionalized as follows:

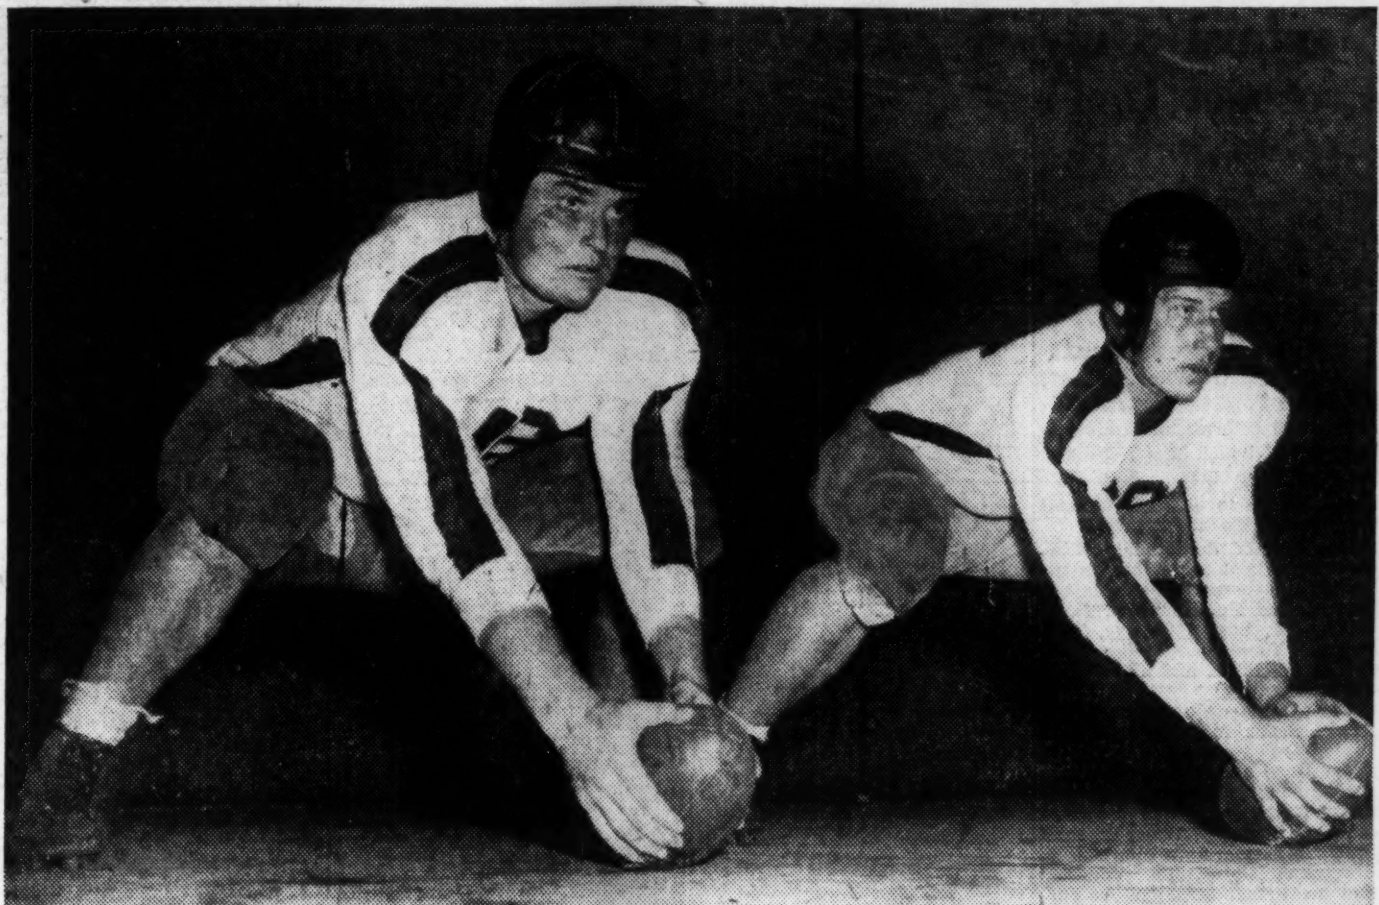

EAST—The only important Thursday game matches Fordham and Arkansas. Saturday's games pair Yale-Harvard, Princeton-Army, Holy Cross-Manhattan, Columbia-Colgate, Brown-Dartmouth, Georgetown-Georgetown, Washington-Pittsburgh-Penn State and Villanova-Duquesne.

MIDWEST—Michigan can clinch second place in the Big Ten by beating Ohio State, while other games in the conference pair Iowa-Illinois, Purdue-Indiana and Wisconsin-Minnesota. In the Big Six, Kansas can clinch at least a title tie by beating Iowa State. The other Big Six games on Thursday matches Missouri and Kansas. Meanwhile three intersectional games pair Oklahoma-Temple, Michigan State-West Virginia, and on Thursday, St. Louis-Texas Tech. In addition Detroit meets Marquette, Notre Dame tries a comeback against Northwestern, and Tulsa tangles with Oklahoma.

SOUTH—Clemson can clinch the Southern conference by beating Furman in its last game, while Duke and Richmond can tie for second place by beating North Carolina State and William and Mary, respectively. The Richmond-W. & M. game is on Thursday. Also in the conference, Virginia Tech plays Virginia Military on Thursday. In the Southeastern conference the title will not be decided until next week. Tennessee is co-leader, engages Kentucky, but still has one more conference game to play. The other co-leader, Mississippi, has its last tilt with Vanderbilt, which is unbeaten in conference competition though tied. Also in the conference, Alabama engages Vanderbilt, and Georgia Tech tries Florida. Non-conference pairings are North Carolina-Virginia, Tulane-Louisiana Normal, Citadel-Seawater, Maryland-Rutgers, and on Friday, South Carolina-Miami.

PACIFIC COAST—Second-place Washington engages U. C. L. A. Outside, Gonzaga plays Washington State.

SOUTHWEST—While the leading Texas

Skeet Honors Captured Here By Chardrone

Bird, duck and rabbit hunters alike, turned out for the "Hunters' Special Shoot," held at the West End Gun Club Sunday.

The management announced it was most successful and 39 shooters took part.

Dr. P. O. Chardrone, of Cedar-town, Ga., took top honors in class A with an excellent score of 44x50.

The runner-up race ended in a tie between Roy Gunter and Joe Cooley. On the toss of a coin, Cooley was declared winner.

Class B honors went to C. M. Miller, of Cornelia, Ga., but only after the toss of a coin, because he also tied with Rudolph Pass, who placed in the runner-up spot. Each had 34x50.

Roy Rodgers, of Palmetto, Ga., broke 31x50 targets to win in class C. J. Field was runner-up.

T. A. Hornsby, of Atlanta, took the class D honors with B. J. Dantone as runner-up.

Aggies—who already have clinched at least a title tie—are idle. Rice tackles Texas Christian, and Southern Methodist engages Baylor. Rice and Southern Methodist are now deadlocked for second place. Outside, Hardin-Simmons entertains San Francisco.

Stanford Would Like To Play Texas Aggies

But Coaches of Far Western Eleven Would Welcome Gophers as Rose Bowl Foe.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Stanford unofficially appeared today to be a house divided on the subject of a Rose Bowl opponent, provided, of course, the Indians are nominated for the New Year's Day football classic as they confidently expect.

Sentiment of a few of the players willing to discuss the matter on a basis of anonymity indicated they would favor Texas A. & M. for a Rose Bowl battle. The Stanford boys think their fullback, Norman Standlee, would show up the Texas Aggies' steam roller, John Kimbrough.

The Stanford coaching staff, at least at the top, would welcome a match with Minnesota, which is prohibited by Big Ten rules from participating in post-season contests.

Clark Shaughnessy, whose "T" formation hoisted Stanford from the cellar to the peak in one season, was first-string fullback at Minnesota in 1913. His substitute was Bernie Bierman, highly successful present Minnesota mentor.

At the football writers' meeting today Shaughnessy was asked if he thought there was a chance of the Big Ten heads changing their attitude of post-season games. He said he thought not, but hastened to explain it was merely a personal opinion based on past experiences in the conference.

"I think it would be a fine thing for football if the Big Ten would change that rule," he said. "An annual game between the winners of the middle west and Pacific coast conference teams would create one of the greatest games of the year."

Officially not a peep was heard from Stanford pending selection of the western representative by the conference members, which may not be forthcoming for two weeks.

Abilene Christian, after losing to Austin 6-7, beat Howard Payne 6-0—that is, after Howard Payne swamped Austin 51-0. St. Benedict's, through a similar cycle, downed the strong Emporia Teachers, U. S. Marines beat Montana—it must be the war—and little Southwestern of Memphis tied Clemson, 12-12.

Anyways, the system made a record for the week of 76.6 per cent on 154 games—Sunday through Saturday—with 117 wins, two upsetting ties, and five ties for very closely rated games.

These post-game ratings represent each team's efficiency of consistent performance to date this season, calculated by the Williamson National Rating System. The ratings indicate each team's relative strength in comparison with its scheduled opponents, but not always the strength of each team as compared to all the others in the table. The final ratings of the completed season, however, should be close to a 100 per cent measure of the strength of the respective teams. The percentage figures below (right-hand column) are the most important. The listing figures (left-hand column) are for convenience, although it is expected that at the end of the season the teams will finish in their true order.

Gophers, Aggies, Huskers, Eagles, Vols, Wolverines in Group.

By MORTIMER KREEGER.
NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 18.—(AP) The Sugar Bowl sounded out officials of 10 colleges and universities, one of which was Nebraska, today on how they would like about $75,000 to let their football teams play here on January 1.

Identities of the other institutions were kept secret but in informed quarters the list was believed to include Minnesota, Texas A. and M., Boston College, Tennessee, Michigan, Georgetown, Cornell, Fordham and a far western team.

A. N. Goldberg, president of the New Orleans Mid-Winter Sports Association which sponsors the Sugar Bowl events, said Nebraska was "among the teams being considered." He made this statement at the "Monday Quarterbacks' Club" in answer to a query as to Nebraska's status, but requested that no further questions on particular teams be asked.

In a previous announcement that questionnaires had been sent to 10 schools, he said the list represented all sections and was not limited to those with unbeaten teams.

It was indicated the institutions queried might include some of the anti-Bowl stronghold of the Ivy League and in the Big Ten, which has frowned on postseason games in the past but recently has shown signs of entering a tieup with the Rose Bowl.

"We have not eliminated any team whose record would justify its consideration," he said, "except the Pacific Coast champion which is pledged to the Rose Bowl. We are trying to get the best game possible and are leaving no stone unturned."

"We cannot reveal the names of teams and have asked the schools not to do so. The coaches feel it would put them on the spot for remaining games. It would also take the boys' minds off their business and would 'sic' the alumni onto the schools."

Goldberg made it clear the queries did not constitute invitations but were "just routine inquiries on attitudes and conditions under which they would be interested."

He said the association's executive committee, which makes the selections, did not expect to send out any more feelers than the 10 sent today and would choose the participants from the schools giving favorable replies.

Hamilton There

Speaking of the State Treasury Department, State Treasurer George Hamilton, ardent sports fan, paused in a business trip from Texas long enough to take in the Tulane-Georgia game Saturday at New Orleans.

Mr. Hamilton was delighted at the performance Georgia gave against the powerful Green Wave.

And he was one of 30,000 who thrilled at a spectacular renewal of the Wave-Bulldog series. There were abundant thrills offered by both teams.

The St. Petersburg Quarterback Club, comprising 105 members, is thinking now of chartering a train and taking in the Georgia-Dartmouth game next season at Athens.

Members talked with Coach Wallace Butts after the game and said they would take a vote on it later on. Each year the St. Pete Quarterbacks charter a train and take in some outstanding game.

Otherwise, the Techs are in good condition for the game.

While their scrimmage is going on this afternoon at Rose Bowl Field, over at Athens, Howell Hollis will be sending his boys through a comparatively mild workout. The Bullpups got in their scrimmaging yesterday and will take it pretty light until game time.

Hollis will bring his boys over Wednesday night after a short workout in Athens. He said yesterday he would probably start three Atlanta boys against the BROWN IS CAPTAIN.

John Brown, husky Boys' High start last season, will be the Bullpup captain in the contest and he will start at one end along with Duck Conger, a teammate on the Purple squad.

The other Atlantans expected to start is Jim Lee, a guard, who did his prepping at Marist. A lot of old teammates will be playing against each other in the game. Buck Andel, center; Sterling Eaves, tackle, and Jack Jordan, guard, all played with Brown and Conger at Boys' High.

Ed Ryckey and Al McDonald were teammates of Lee at Marist.

FIVE SMITHIES.
In addition, the Baby Jacket squad includes five boys from Tech High, all well known to Atlanta football fans. They are Frank Bonner, a brother of Crenshaw, who played for Georgia three years ago, Ben Cogburn, Paschal, Forrest Smith and Preston West.

There is a real interest in the game and a crowd of 25,000 is expected if the weather is good. Georgia is leading, four games to three, in the series, but Tech is favored to even up the score this year.

The game will start at 2:30 o'clock, giving everybody a chance to finish their Thanksgiving day turkey. Tickets are on sale at Muses. A dollar gets a reserve seat and you can sit in the south stands for a 50-cent piece.

Vols May Be First in Three Leading Bowls

Neyland Teams Were in Orange Bowl '39, Rose Bowl in '40.

By ROMNEY WHEELER.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 18.—(AP)—A strict drillmaster with a passion for detail may become the nation's first football coach to take a team successively to three different post-season bowl games. He is Major Robert Keese Neyland, U. S. A. retired, who since 1926 has devoted himself to making the University of Tennessee a leader in big-time intercollegiate football.

Nearing 50, his once-dark hair turning iron gray, he is piloting his Volunteers toward their third straight undefeated season.

BEAT OKLAHOMA.
Neyland's brand of football made its first mid-winter appearance at Miami, January 2, 1939, when the Vols whipped Oklahoma, 17-0, in the Orange Bowl. Last New Year they took it to the Rose Bowl with less success, losing to Southern California, 0-14. Now, with Stanford and the Texas Aggies favored for the next Tournament of Roses, there is speculation Neyland may conclude his cycle with an appearance in the New Orleans Sugar Bowl.

Neyland's system is fundamentally power football; deception is secondary. But the very defensiveness with which they develop leaves opponents bewildered. Scouts marvel at blocking and defensive play of his linemen, but to Neyland it merely is the inevitable result of painstaking hours of practice.

SINGLE OUT STARS.

No detail is unconsidered. When Tennessee was preparing to play Louisiana State, Neyland worried over the Tigers' great guard, J. W. Goree. To impress the varsity, he designated a bulky freshman as "Goree," then secretly signalled the boy every move intended by the regulars. "Goree" smothered every play. Publicly Neyland described the L. S. U. star as the best guard in the nation, better than his own All-America Ed Molinski and Bob Suffridge. The result: Tennessee beat L. S. U. 28-0, with Goree thoroughly outplayed.

Criticized occasionally for alternating big games with "breathers," Neyland clamps his jaws in silence. But intimates say he calls Tennessee's 10-game schedule "sane" as against "insane overscheduling" of some schools which tackle big-time opposition week after week.

NOT SUPERSTITIOUS.

He admits no superstition, but has worn the same gray suit for every game since 1937 when the Vols began their unbroken string of 30 victories in regular-season play.

He is a native of Greenville, Tex., and a graduate of West Point, where he starred in football, boxing and baseball. He became head football coach at Tennessee in 1926, serving with exception of one year—1935—when he was ordered to army duty in Panama. He retired from the army in 1936. His Tennessee record: 117 won, 13 lost, right tied.

OASIS WINS.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 18.—(AP)—The How's stable's filly, Oasis, won her third straight victory in easy style over the Bowie track today when she captured the 11-furlong Princess Anne purse.

Mittens, Hay Warmed Boys' Hi Players During Knoxville Tilt

Long 'Undies' Helped, Too; Must Shed 'Em for Next Game—at Miami; Tech High Plays Columbia.

By JOHN MARTIN.

Shorty Doyal has jumped on the sleigh and played Santa Claus to his Purples over a month ahead of schedule. Those who had warm hearts and shivered for the Boys' High outfit during their invasion of Knoxville's modified Arctic zone, were wasting their efforts. Santa Claus Doyal saw to this with mittens and long underwear.

Doyal pulled the purse strings of the oBys' High Athletic Association for nearly a hundred bucks and invested it in Tennessee fleece and hay, staple commodities of the Smoky Mountain section. With it the C. I. A. A. champions thrashed the starch out of the Trojans and at the same time gave a brash winter breeze a couple of kicks in the pants.

The Purples were equipped with an 89-cent brand of undies, in the pink powder-puff parlance, and went out red hot. They wore wool mittens at the start, but boys like Charlie Furchgott, Pig Defreeze and Bill Bailey threw them off after the first scrimmage.

"What had me worried," Doyal admitted, "was the haystack." Two bales of hay alongside the bench kept the idle Purples' feet warm.

"Our boys from out around the edge of the city and the real country fellows with hay seed in the hair," explained Doyal, "didn't want to get off the bench. It was the first time I'd ever seen any of our boys slow about getting in the game." With the Purples' next game in Miami, the long fleecers will have to wait, perhaps. But they'll come in handy next year, and in the meantime, they can be used on duck hunts.

Boys' High will lay off until their December trip to Miami. They rested yesterday, but will resume practice today.

All other teams except North Fulton, which is through, will see action this weekend. Tech High plays at Charlotte; Commercial goes to Richmond Academy; G. M. A. plays out in Pine Bluff, Ark.; Marist travels to Lanier.

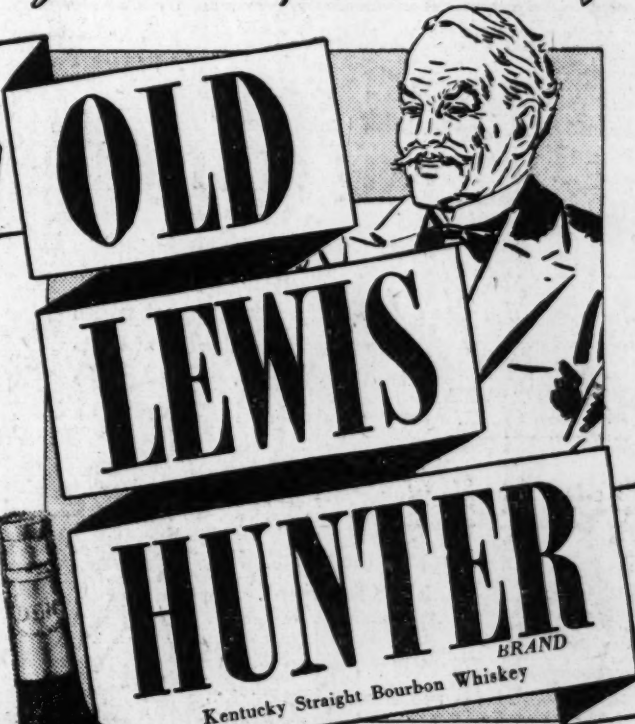

In the N. G. I. C. Russell will be entertained at Griffin; and Fulton moves into LaGrange. Decatur has a bye. Marietta will be host to Hapeville and Richardson meets Canton at Canton.

HAPES ILL.

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Fullack Merle Hapes and Tackle Chet Kozel went to the hospital with colds today, but Coach Harry Mehre believed they would be able to play for the University of Mississippi against Mississippi State.

Glory Agrees To See Allan--Helen Warns Her That It Is Dangerous

SYNOPSIS. Glory Stevens tears off her wedding gown, leaving the bride waiting at the church, and just catches a train for Los Angeles and Hollywood. Since she was a little girl she has wanted to be an actress like her mother who died when Glory was 13. On the train she meets Helen Jamison who has won some recognition as a character actress. She advises Glory to return home, then, calling herself a fool, suggests that she take an inexpensive apartment next to hers. Glory makes the studio rounds daily. She gets a part in a picture. Helen suggests to Scottie Weston, her own agent, that he discourage the girl and send her home. Instead he gets her a job in the Sunset studio wardrobe department, but the first day a pin in a jacket sleeve scratches Mona Greer and that temperamental star has Glory discharged. Scottie sends her to dramatic school and she is seen constantly with him at night. Her first night spot wearing gowns designed by William Van Lint. Scottie's handsome young lawyer, meets Glory in her dressing room and falls in love. She goes to a smart apartment. Allan leaves suddenly and Glory is shocked. He gives her an engagement ring, saying he is going to Mexico to see Mona. He tells her he loved Glory. Mona announces her engagement to Allan and the newspapers assure her this is a ruse. Then Scottie tells her that Allan has been married in Yuma. Now go on with the story.

INSTALLMENT XXV. The first day of production on the new picture found Glory Stevens on the set early. Her make-up and costume were complete. Helen had given her her old rabbit's foot "for good luck." Glory had laughed but at heart she too was superstitious. This picture was to be important to her in more than one way. It was her first starring vehicle, her chance to become one of Hollywood's favorites. And, almost as vital, was the fact that Allan Rhodes would be in her life once more.

Glory had to smile at herself for thinking that Allan could be important compared to her career. But since the night that Mona had caused a scene in the night club, Glory had decided to give Allan a chance. Perhaps he could explain things no one had suspected. Perhaps he was even planning a divorce from the woman who must have tricked him into marrying her. If such was the case, Glory would reconsider.

But that first morning their work gave them no opportunity for personal conversation. At noon, Glory had lunch in the commissary with Max Cavell. It was a thrill to eat with her director in the crowded room. She was still in make-up and once she heard an admiring tourist whisper, "Look! It's Glory Stevens."

The extra girls eyed her enviously. "What's that?" they asked one another. And Glory pitied them. They were young and pretty, too. Maybe they had just as much talent, perhaps more, but Glory had had the breaks. Scottie Weston had been pushing her from the start. If it hadn't been for Scottie, she would still be one of the great army, who worked a few weeks out of the entire year and tried to stretch a meager income so that they could keep going. They were so young, so beautiful, so stubborn, in their refusal to give up the almost hopeless battle for success.

"And yet, I was just as stupid," Glory admitted. "Poor kids, they would be a lot better off with homes and husbands." And suddenly she laughed at herself. "That sounds exactly like what Mark would say."

But even if those other girls with their beautiful strained faces would be better off leading a normal domestic life, Glory Stevens was going to be a success. She was the exception that had made the grade and she would certainly be a fool to sacrifice fame now that it was within her grasp. Already she looked forward to that night of nights when her picture would be presented for its premiere—when her name would blaze in lights.

"Yes," Glory thought ironically, "my name will be in light and Allan's will be beside it. They would be linked on the screen though in life they must be separated. Or must they? Glory was still sure that Allan would take advantage of the first opportunity to have a private conversation with her. He was not to be seen in the commissary, but Max Cavell told her that Allan preferred to lunch in his dressing room.

The afternoon's work was tedious, and still not a flicker of interest from Allan. But at six o'clock, as Glory hurried from the studio, she found him at the gate just as he had waited the first time she met him.

"Get in," Allan commanded. "I'll take you home."

As they drove off, he was silent. Several times he glanced at her but he did not speak until he asked, "Will you go out with me tonight, Glory?" All I want is a chance to explain.

His voice was so earnest that it wrung her heart but she hesitated. "What about Mona?"

"She's out of town. I am not asking anything but an opportunity to tell you what is your right to know. I should have done it before."

When he put it like that, how could she refuse?

But when she told Helen, the older woman objected. "You're very foolish," she said.

Glory threw her coat and hat on the bed. "I've got to hear what he has to say," she said defiantly. "After all, we were engaged and I have a right to know what happened." She realized she was using Allan's words.

"This is going to lead to trouble," Helen prophesied.

"I don't care," Glory cried recklessly. "I'm tired of being a martyr. For all I know, Allan may be planning to get out of his marriage to Mona. She certainly forced him into it against his will."

"That's what you think."

"I know it," Glory declared hotly. "Here, Helen, please fasten my dress, will you?"

Tillie appeared in the doorway. "Gentlemen to see you, Miss Glory. Mr. Spencer."

Mark! Why would he have to come at a moment like this? Glory hurried into the living room.

"I thought you might like to have dinner with me, Glory," was Mark's greeting.

She smiled nervously. "I'm sorry. I can't tonight, Mark. I'm expecting someone else." She knew she was being rude. But she must leave before Allan arrived.

Mark, however, with a maddening lack of tact, settled himself before the fireplace. "I might as well wait until then," he said cheerfully.

Glory surveyed him with dismay but before she had a chance to protest the buzzer rang and Allan Rhodes appeared.

When Glory introduced them, Mark said casually, "We've met before."

Allan asked rudely, "Ready, Glory?"

Glory went for her coat, leaving the two men eyeing each other with mutual dislike. When they left, Mark bade them a courteous farewell, adding, "I'll see you later, Glory."

Glory looked at him dumbfounded. What on earth was the matter with the man?

In the car, Allan said, "Well, your friend seems to be taking good care of you."

"He's Scottie's lawyer," Glory explained.

"Sure. I know. Evidently you didn't waste much time replacing me."

Glory was amazed. How could he talk live this after jilting her a week before their wedding?

Suddenly Allan stopped the car and faced her.

"Glory, you know I'm still mad about you! I'll never get over it!"

As he drew her into his arms, warnings crashed like bombs in Glory's mind but she did not heed them. "Tell me what happened, Allan," she pleaded.

Allan shrugged. "I had to do it. Glory. Mona was going to sue me. The studio told me they wouldn't stand for it. That's the whole story."

"You mean that's all you had to tell me?" she asked in surprise.

"Well, after all, I used to be terribly fond of Mona, and we had been drinking together that day. I still don't know how it happened. But, Glory, darling, you're the one I love. I swear it. I thought I could forget. But I can't go on without you... I can't!"

Glory thrilled to his words. "You mean you'll ask Mona to get a divorce?"

Allan drew back. Divorce? Certainly not! What made you think that?"

A cold wind began to blow through her heart. "But you said you loved me, you said you could not forget..."

"I can't," he said.

His handsome face was pleading.

"Just what do you mean, Allan?" she insisted.

"I mean," he said unhappily, "that I've got to go on with Mona. My career..."

"That's ridiculous," Glory said, quietly.

He shrugged again. "We're married and there's nothing I can do about it. But you and I can still see each other. Mona won't find out..."

"You mean you want to have Mona and me, too? Is that it?"

He attempted to put his arms around her, but she shook them off furiously. What a fool she had been! Allan Rhodes had been playing a game with her from the start and he wanted to continue it. He wanted to go on seeing her, but remain married to Mona. Too weak to let Glory alone, too cowardly to be honest with Mona.

For the first time, Glory saw him for what he was. Had she ever thought him handsome? How weak he looked to her now. How whining the voice that she had once considered compelling. How tarnished and cheap this love that she had idealized! Oh, what a fool she had been to think he ever cared; to suffer all these weeks; to come out with him tonight and put herself in such a false position with Mark! She could see now she had loved an image she had built up in her own mind! She had never loved the real Allan. But the mask was gone now. It was over at last!

"Take me home!" she commanded. "This minute!"

Allan was angry, too. "Okay—if that's the way you feel about it," he started the car.

"He doesn't care," Glory thought. "Allan Rhodes is too conceited to care for any woman."

"I don't ever want to see you again," she flared.

"You forgot we're making a picture together," he jeered.

Yes, in her excitement she had forgotten, and how could she go on with that picture!

She was trembling when she entered her apartment. She had forgotten that Mark said he would see her later. At the sight of him, she burst into tears.

Instantly Mark was at her side and she wept heartbrokenly against his shoulder.

DRAMA—Romance and a tax-fraud get tangled to provide an exciting drama, "Love and Taxes," to be presented by the "First Nighter" over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Barbara Luddy and Les Tremayne co-star in the original play, which was written by Ralph W. Hunter. The story involves a young city reporter and a charming red-headed girl editor of a small town newspaper, who are covering the same story. In practically no time at all, more than professional rivalry develops. Eric Sagerquist conducts the orchestra and Joe Ainley directs.

CONCERT—All but $40,000 of a million-dollar estate left by a Confederate veteran, who died in 1933 at the age of 91, has been distributed, and now the heir to the remaining share, a first cousin, is to be sought by the "Court of Missing Heirs" when it "convenes" over WGST at 7 o'clock tonight for its 49th session.

The missing heir is the daughter of the veteran's mother's sister. She moved with her three daughters from Kentucky to Springfield, Ill., in the early 1900s, and nothing has been heard from them since. Also sought by the "Court" is a 51-year-old man, who is heir to $7,000 left by his parents when they died earlier this year. He left home 30 years ago, when he was 21, and has been heard from only half a dozen times during that time. He was a cowhand in Wyoming when he wrote his last letter home.

GRAND CENTRAL—Elsbeth Eric, Herbert Rudley and Allan Reed, all equally well known on Broadway and in radio, will be featured in another complete and original Grand Central station drama over WAGA at 8 o'clock tonight.

Others in the large cast of this week's show include Arthur Vinton of stage, screen and radio; Jack Arthur, singer and master of ceremonies on a number of radio shows, and Jackie Grimes, talented child actor. Regulars on the program include Lew White, organist, who plays his own original score as the background music for each drama; Tom Shirley, announcer, and Ira Ashley, director.

Russ Hails Franklin.

Much information on the attitude of eighteenth century Russian society toward Benjamin Franklin is contained in a recent issue of the magazine International Literature, published in Moscow. In an article to mark the 150th anniversary of the death of the envoy of the colonies, A. Startsev alludes to Franklin as "the great thinker and ideological and practical leader of the American Revolution." "Among the great men of the 18th century," Startsev continues, "Franklin is one of the most original and likeable personalities. A self-taught genius, brought up in the poor environment of handicraft workers in the remote British trans-oceanic colony, he achieved world renown and brought European enlightenment to America, only to become the connecting link in carrying the experience of the bourgeois revolution to Europe."
